SoftActivity Monitor is a network monitoring application that helps you keep an eye on multiple remote computers at the same time. It can be used to monitor employees or students, as the program gives administrators full control over the target OC. In order to have access to other remote computers, you need to install SoftActivity Monitor on them. The layout is straightforward and gives users the possibility to add a new remote agent to the list by specifying the host name, IP address, computer, user, and display name. What's more, you can make SoftActivity Monitor log keystrokes, opened programs, visited websites, sent and received email messages (e.g. POP/SMTP), chat conversations for various instant messaging applications. You can also specify the saving directory on the remote PC where the log files should be stored. Another important feature worth mentioning enables users to use capture the screen activity to an image file based on user's actions, automatically take snapshots at a specified time, stop the capturing process if the computer is idle, as well as take screenshots in a full screen mode or capture active windows. Plus, you can specify the image size, limit the disk space, monitor folders and drives based on user-defined keywords, examine all files on removable drives, as well as create exclusion lists. SoftActivity Monitor allows users to display only the online or offline agents, remove the selected computers from the list, perform simultaneous actions on multiple PCs, and switch to a full screen mode. It is also possible to set up passwords, download logs manually or make the program automatically save them at a specified time. All in all, SoftActivity Monitor offers an intuitive environment for helping users monitor remote computers efficiently and easily. Its straightforward approach and useful features make it an ideal tool for all types of users, regardless of their experience level.
