I have a lot of fond memories from when I was younger and played the Sims 2. One of my favorite aspects of the Sims 2 was the fact that I could customize my town. I enjoyed building my house, opening up stores, then playing around with my town as if it were real life. So I was excited to see that in the Sims 3, you could actually open up a town. You have all these neighborhoods, and I didn't have to just build a house. I could actually build a neighborhood. Then I saw that it said that it was being released on October 15th, so I was stoked. What I noticed, was that I couldn't just download the game, I had to purchase the expansion pack in order to have this feature. I wasn't sure if I wanted to do that or not. Then I thought that maybe if I didn't buy the expansion, I could still get this feature, but I wouldn't be able to build a neighborhood. That way I didn't have to pay for the game. I saw a Sims 3 review on YouTube, and the person played the game and loved it, but at the same time, he didn't like the idea that he had to pay for the expansion pack just so he could get the neighborhood feature. Then he played the game and the expansion pack was included with the game, and he could still have a neighborhood. I thought it was kind of weird that the game company wanted to charge me for something that I thought I should have been able to do without having to purchase something else. Then I thought, what if I'm like that too? It would be a little bit weird, because I know it's free and all, but what if I wanted to play it and I didn't have enough money to buy the expansion pack, but the game comes with it. So I can still play the game without paying 4bc0debe42
