Mr Moller said $1 billion had been invested into the region over the last few years, including the construction of a new $330 million free trade zone. "We're getting the best of the best," he said. "We have an idea for becoming a centre of gravity for the Asia-Pacific region and that is what we're actively doing at the moment." However, Mr Moller conceded the regional approach to development was a tough sell to voters. "It's not an easy one... but it is a special-case case. "It takes some explaining. We have to make the case." Mr Moller said the Royal Flying Doctor Service's Western Operations Manager would be moving to Bunbury in 2018. The RFS has warned the Federal Government is about to cut funding for emergency response in the south-west. The organisation recently revealed Canberra's Flight Ambulance has failed to respond to 74 per cent of medical emergencies across WA. In a submission to WA Parliament, the RFS said only 52 per cent of all confirmed medical emergencies had been responded to in 2016-17, as compared to 69 per cent nationally. The organisation said Perth was the least serviced city, with only 32 per cent of medical emergencies responded to there. The Royal Flying Doctor Service's Western Operations Manager Stephen Moller is moving 09e8f5149f
