What's New In DBConvert For FoxPro MSSQL?

DBConvert for MS FoxPro & MSSQL is a database migration utility used for converting data from MSSQL database to Microsoft FoxPro and from FoxPro database to MSSQL server. You can convert FoxPro to MS SQL or MS SQL to FoxPro simply by configuring several options through Wizard interface or in command line mode. The ability to organize application work using command line parameters is supplemented with a scheduler so you can run the program without user control after task scheduling. If direct access to your MS SQL database is denied (insufficient privileges), you can save your data into SQL dump file to overcome such server restrictions. The destination file will consist of MS SQL statements for recreation all the tables and to filling them with the data. Using this dump file MS SQL server administrator will add data to your MS SQL database. With this tool you can also generate FoxPro program files (.prg) with SQL-script inside if you need to update remote FoxPro databases. You can check each program step with savable log files and run again conversion with session files keeping all your inputs and settings. One of the key things of database managing is the ability to filter data during conversion. Integrated data filters allow users to retrieve only specific data for converted tables according to defined filtering criterias (conditions). Filters give you more control on data migration process. To guide you through all conversion stages and settings adjustment for data filters and customization options detailed help file is enclosed as well. NOTE: Does not support Microsoft SQL Server Desktop Engine. Does not convert system (hidden) tables. Does not convert linked tables. Does not support 'OLE Object' packages. Does not convert compound foreign keys to MS Visual FoxPro. Let me start with a cautionary note. There are many, many problems with the proposed HBCU alternative to FAFSA, and I suspect that many people who think this plan is a good idea are making some pretty basic mistakes in the process. For example, the National Center for Higher Education Management Systems (NCHEMS) appears to have little or no experience with community college students or institutions, so it is at least possible that this proposal will make the problems it claims to address even worse. I think this is a real problem. But I don't want to dwell on that problem too long. There is a better reason to oppose this proposal, and it is that it contradicts current state law, which in fact requires that every FAFSA student must also apply for Stafford Loans. The problem with the plan is pretty simple. The mandate of the Federal Government is to provide scholarships to students who are entitled to them. The folks who want to change that to say that this should only be the case for students who are living in their parents' basements or have boyfriends and girlfriends that are willing
