Navisworks has a new version available for all the users who want the latest release of the scientific, geotechnical and related program. The new version comes now with a better, more flexible workflow and increased productivity. Navisworks includes the new Workflow and Data Exchange interface, which makes computers more easy to manage and scientifically efficient. Navigate and plan. Automate and analyze. Learn more about Navisworks. Navisworks is a robust analysis tool for AutoCAD® and Revit® architecture and engineering projects. Maintain your model in tight synchronicity with the software, then analyze your plans for improved design and cost management. Navisworks Manage Your Model. Easily manage and optimize your plans. Use Navisworks to: Track, analyze and optimize your plans. See and act on the changes made to your model using a simple tap. Combine and synchronize your data with the other software, such as Revit. For example, you can make changes to your model from the Revit software. The model can then be modified using the Revit software. See Modify from the Revit software for details. You can also use a Revit software to combine and synchronize model data from other software such as Revit Modify from the Revit software. This feature is for the Revit software that allows you to modify the building model. Use the same model as in the Revit software. It is important to know the model code. There are two types of models. The one shown in the image is the standard model. The other is the custom model. You can modify the basic model and then use the custom model in Revit. This tutorial shows how to use the standard model model. When you open the model in Revit, you will see an image with the different types of model. The type of model is depending on the type of building. The standard model is the model that is used for all buildings.
