Q: Preventing Java JSP from executing code between the and tags I have a JSP-page which holds some javascript. When I click a button, I am invoking the JavaScript's alert method. However, when I click on the button the alert is shown before the is executed. It happens because the tag starts a new tag. Is there any way to prevent the page from executing the JavaScript code between the and tags? A: The script is inserted on page load (so the javascript code is executed before the html code). If you want to control the insertion, you can use a jsp custom tag to insert the script just after the tag. "We are pleased to announce the 2017 Tour de France will be co-organized by ASO and the UCI. This significant event will be once again hosted in the epicenter of French culture, the incomparable Paris city, along with another French team, La Pomme d'Or, who will join the French team FDJ. The second French team will be Team BigMat. Their participation in the race is a strategic choice with which the sport's'mother' will make its comeback. It is an opportunity for the ASO to connect with the new generation of racers, as well as a chance for French cycling to reconnect with the world through a race that will bring together the cities of Paris and Bordeaux and of course, Mont Ventoux, the new stage finish with a new route. With the participation of this second team, the race will highlight a new generation of racing cyclists and a new type of Tour de France, which will be more than ever a showcase for French cycling. A showcase of the diversity of French cycling, its pros, its amateurs and its celebrities. A showcase of our world champion jerseys, of the diversity of French landscapes, traditions, gastronomy, and our heritage." "I'm very pleased that French cycling is now a full and official member of the UCI. I think it is a clear sign that the sport is taking serious steps to grow and become more established. Our 2017 Tour de France will focus on the themes that really matter to us: a new generation
