This application allows you to create a simple mouse tool, which can then be used to change the mouse pointer's appearance to whatever style you want. Simply choose a new template, modify it as desired and apply the resulting settings. In fact, MouseTool comes with a large number of predefined templates that you can use. For example, you can change the style of your mouse pointer to look like a link, or even turn it into a spot. The application is not very intuitive, though, as it does not feature a customizable interface. The various templates appear on the right side of the program window and the only way to change the pointer's appearance is to select a different one and start editing. MouseTool can be run on both 32-bit and 64-bit Windows versions. The 64-bit version is recommended as it can support a larger set of template changes.

A: You can use the Windows Movie Maker. You will find a tutorial how to use this app on the following link:

Q: Can I use iCloud on Windows and Mac to sync my Microsoft Office files? We have a standard office setup where everybody has a Mac and a Windows PC. We also use iCloud to keep files between Macs and iPhones. Is there any way that we can synchronise our Microsoft Office files across our Mac and Windows machines using iCloud?

A: I had exactly the same question when I set up an iMac and a MacBook Pro. From the Office website: If you use Office for Mac 2011, you can store your files in iCloud. In the Mail, Contacts, and Calendars app, you can add the iCloud account to your Microsoft Outlook account and then store the files in your Microsoft Outlook online storage. Microsoft Office for Mac 2011 is a Mac client of Microsoft Office 2013, so this is exactly what you're looking for. The idea is that you can have everything you need in one single app. As far as I know, it's not possible with previous versions of Office, but it's easy to see if it's the case on the above link.
