Michigan YMCA has launched a new family camping trip for 2014 summer campers ages 8 to 15. Children will enjoy exploring the outdoors, exploring history and building friendships. The trips will take place in Michigan, Ohio and Indiana. Campers will spend a fun and educational week in a Michigan campground. Campers can explore a wide variety of Michigan’s state parks, explore the history of Michigan, learn about camping and campfire cooking, build community, and create memories that will last a lifetime. “The Michigan YMCA is thrilled to be able to offer families this exciting opportunity to explore Michigan’s state parks and to connect with other campers and camp leaders,” says Kevin Schuldt, the state director of the Michigan YMCA. The Michigan YMCA welcomes campers of all ability levels. Campers are grouped together by age, so no matter how active a camper may be, he or she will be able to participate and make friends. “All of the campers will meet new people of all ages and abilities. They’ll form new friendships, make new memories, and have fun in a safe and clean environment.”

V-flex enables multiple users to record and playback keystrokes on a single computer, without having to use multiple systems. The invention provides an interface between physical computers and the V-flex recording and playback systems. The V-flex recording and playback systems have the capacity to read and save keystrokes that are issued to the physical computer from any application on any computer in the network. In order to record a keystroke in V-flex, a user merely presses the key that he wants to record, and presses the special key on the keyboard to send the keystrokes to V-flex. The V-flex system then displays a blinking cursor at the current position of the keyboard cursor on the screen. The user then proceeds to record the keystrokes, by typing, pressing the space bar, etc. Upon completion, the user presses the special key again, and the keystrokes are sent back to the physical computer that generated them. The V-flex system automatically saves and displays the keystrokes that were generated. Once the V-flex system records keystrokes from a physical computer, it can easily be replicated to other physical computers in the network. With the help of V-flex's optional software, the user can also record and playback the keystrokes on any Windows application. In the replay mode, the user simply enters the recorded keystrokes into the Windows application, and V-flex replays the keystrokes for the user. By means of the optional recording and replay software, the invention can be used to record and playback keystrokes from any application on any computer in the network. Keymacro Features: It is possible to record and playback keystrokes from any Windows application Multiple users can play and record keystrokes on the same Windows computer V-flex can be used to record any keyboard keystrokes Multiple users can replay keystrokes from the same Windows application Keymacro Benefits: User can record and playback keystrokes on any Windows application The system can easily record and playback keystrokes from any application on any physical computer in the network V-flex's software makes it easy to record and replay keystrokes on any application on any physical computer in the network The system is easy to use and has a minimal learning curve A motherboard upgrade for the CPU, a different BIOS version, or a CPU clock change might be needed. This can be accomplished by downloading and installing a BIOS update from HP's website. It 1d6a3396d6
