You are a neutral character, destined to be the only person who can heal the realm!...and maybe the only person who can make it through the Dungeon of Time itself! In order to do that, you will have to create your own healer to assist you, and to use as you find yourself in need of a powerful helper. You don't need to build a whole team of healers though - you can create just one and treat it as a big, badass sword that will never, ever, let you down. Story: Beyond the borders of the continent of Malentinc, in the land of Prephoron, the realm of healers went to war and brought down the old king's throne. In the chaos of the conflict, it wasn't the king who was in danger of being killed, but one of his generals. Luckily for the lonely general, his brother and best friend had left him a pact upon his death. The bond was that neither would survive the coming fall of the kingdom - and a war hero that would definitely stop the bloodshed. This time it was the hero who's brother was off. And the secret with the pact would be to survive the last battle and watch out for the other side - and this last battle would result in a confrontation that would destroy a new realm. Join the player in the war against evil. You're the only one who can survive and stop the plans of the evil mastermind! Healer's Quest gameplay is very much inspired by some of the best indie titles of our time. All the items that you can use to survive the journey will be unique, and you'll find yourself constantly changing equipment as you acquire new items. Some other indie titles that we were inspired by: Game "Healer's Quest - Original Soundtrack" gameplay: -Player will be able to free roam the world map with their unique neutral character that will never let them down. -Dozens of different units that will fight, poison and level up with you for the duration of the game. -24 weapons that can be equipped with the character - including shield, bow, two-handed sword, two-handed sword plus shield, dagger, two-handed axe, two-handed axe plus shield, and of course the famous Sword. -4 kinds of enemies that will fight and poison you on the way. -Death and its consequences for the characters. , 3.5 x 4.5" Inspired by winter travel across frozen streams and forests, this painting started with just color and brushwork. The images were painted over graphite paper, then sketched back with acrylics. These drawings were then translated back into graphite as a guide for further image development. Colors were then added with washes of violet hues. When I mucked this portion of painting out, I got stuck in the foreground of one of the images of a classic icicle. Refining that area brought life to the painting. Berwick, Maine, USA - Coffee Blend I woke up to some fresh new fall colors on my deck - and when I realized it was still summer, I knew my life as an artist had changed. Summers are shorter and full of working artist part time jobs, shopping, and fun but the winters I read, write and work as a full time artist. Canvas Painting Calendar: Sept. 2014 This painting is what I bring to go with me when I am traveling on a road trip or on a train. Oil Pastel Postmark Painting During a Road Trip I am a road trip junkie. Yet I can't say I love to travel alone or can barely manage dragging myself away from my computer for more than an hour or two. I almost never consider myself adventurous but if I am alone and in the right place - I am very capable of disappearing completely into the character of the people and setting I find myself in. There is a story I haven't told because it felt a little too intimate - too real. I had a friend from college that emailed me on Saturday about something ridiculous and I realized it was Monday which meant I had to be honest with her in a way I wasn't sure I was ready to be. While I wished she had been around for a trip to New Mexico, I was honest with the reason why I missed her. I am not ashamed of telling you that I cried. And I felt like a mama bear when I allowed myself to tell her. It felt good. And I needed to hear it. While I will always love to tell a story about the people I know and our relationship, it is strange how something in me needs a little vulnerability. 13 comments: I absolutely love the texture & loveliness of these paintings. You bring the richness of Fall into the full sun, and the

I'm NOT sure if this needs the single or double tags.. but you said you'd make sure it was right. Q: How to continue a number sequence into the next print, preserving ellipsis in rmarkdown I'm working on my first book project, and the rmarkdown code produces a table which has 3 columns per page. The script to make table of contents produces a set of numbers in the C column starting with 1, 104, 173, 226, 283, 336,... I'd like these numbers to be followed by a, b, c and these numbers would occur in the next three columns as well, however, they would be ellipsed because of the 93 in x_panel_rep. I tried adding a preamble with put(legend.position = "none"), but this confused the minima and maxima within the columns. The corresponding pdf renders perfectly but then the numbers print a line above the columns, even though I tried to modify that with par(komment =...) before printing, as well as changing the dimensiosn (width,...) and padding of the table. I cannot exactly recreate the problem since it is fully reproducible which might be possible only in a book project. I tried to create a print on demand version but that is not as pretty for mobile readers as having a printed table. Any help is greatly appreciated! A: update: It seems that your issue is the size of your table as pointed out by @montasser! You can use a.txt

file and then use the "file" function in latex, like this: ```{r, echo=FALSE} library(readtext) library(knitr) library(readr) ``` You can use it with any text editor like textr or something like that.

System Requirements:

1. Minimum system requirements apply to anyone who uses Audacity. As with other video editing applications, it's a good idea to make sure that your system can play back videos from the fastest hard drive you have available. 2. Most systems should be able to handle editing for about an hour or so. If you have a more powerful system, consider editing for 2 hours or more. 3. Multitrack recording is highly recommended, and will make a big difference in speed and quality. 4. All core modules can be run from scratch or
