About the game: Gameplay The game has many mechanics. To start of, this game is a type of stealth, action game. This is defined by the following mechanics: No HUD - there is no instrumentals or information indicators which obstruct the gameplay. No hand holding - the player has to read the controls, observe the environment and figure out what to do on their own. No experience systems - the player gets the weapons and upgrades from the game, and the enemy's reactions are independent from their playtime. Close range combat, using CQC (Close Quarters Combat) is possible in all weapons, even shotguns - they take longer to kill, but leave enemies in a much more shredded condition. Access to car, boat, bikes and any other vehicle - there are numerous ways to navigate to the next part of the mission. Deployable entry ways - wireless web cameras, disarmable devices for doors and a pipe with a microphone that can be cut. Clever sandbox - movement is restricted by obstacles, but they don't always have to follow set routes. There are several places where enemies are on lookout, so they can keep an eye out. Even large buildings have limited access points and it is possible to sneak past them using the environment. There is no leveling system, but rather augmentations. Each weapon has a set of augments that can be bought with credits - the more credits the better. The augments offer upgrades to primary weapon stats and abilities, such as adding more damage, range and accuracy. Augments can be used on both pistols and SMGs, while more powerful augmentations are possible only on SMGs. SMGs can also perform distraction grenades. Pistol grenades are only available in the "beginner" difficulty levels. The obvious example of weapons with higher power are sniper rifles. Sniper rifles can also unlock "level 2" augments, which adds one bullet to a magazine instead of one magazine. Weapon stats are available through the gun formulae. During the game each weapon's stats are marked with a symbol. The more stars (☆) - ★ denotes the weapon's power. The color of the stars depends on the weapon, but is always red for snipers and green for pistols. As in real life, a damaged weapon will lead to penalties, but the player can always repair the weapon, which can be done by a needle. The weapon recovers

What's new in Act Of War: Direct Action:

Boo King Boo Boo (pronounced "Quit-Boo") is the mascot for the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa, where he resides on a Big Crimson Bear. The backside of his head is black and the frontside is orange. According to the school's athletic teams' info guide, Boo's favorite hobbies include eating meat and ribs, hanging out with friends, and talkin' trash. University of Alabama (Tuscaloosa) Ali, "Gina" (name given after her 2nd child) Ben (wife) Grandson Ian History The King Boo Boo character was created by Milton Langham Moore III, nicknamed "Boo," in 1971. The character's name is a double-entendre, of course, referencing the University of Alabama and the big, overgrown, fluffy-haired bumblebee. Boo had to be changed as the original Boo had grown a sizable ego through years of being UA's most well known mascot. To make sure that there was no bad blood between the university and the budding mascot, they erected a statue of Alabama Coach Bear Bryant and on May 13, 2003, had Boo's head placed atop that statue as the "spirit leader" of this prestigious university. Coincidentally, this was the same day that Ursula Washington's son Chris became the first Black Bear for the University of Alabama to be born. They went by the name of Tuscaloosa until they somehow got as far as making a name for themselves. It is worth noting that the first student icon for The University of Alabama was the Paul Bunyan character who was not an actual mascot but rather a tradition that began with the class of 1889, for which Boo Boo is a fitting and current mascot. Mascot Do and Don't's: Be aware this very human character is protected by contractual laws and the NCAA. Be sure not to get within 5 feet of the HAT. Don't get too close to the costume, block Boo's path, or allow the costume to get in the way of traffic during football games. The mascot gets very protective of his 'hood, chasing off patrons who come in and try to interfere with the parade or the costume blocking their path. Boo also has a tendency to hurl his spunk at the fans whenever things get a bit too wild. Love ya Big Al, but back off the sidelines! Traditions There are several traditions that the mascot sponsors. These are listed
