AdwCleaner is a portable and easy-to-use tool to uninstall all unwanted programs, browser toolbars and browser add-ons (PUPs/LPIs) such as toolbars, web accelerators, search providers and much more... Download Link: An introduction and overview of the Windows Registry and its configuration file. Registry is a software-based database that stores configuration data that is used to manage a Windows system. The Windows Registry contains information about programs that are installed on the system, drivers that are loaded, hardware that is installed, files that are open, and the Windows system settings. This information is vital to the smooth running of any Windows system. The advent of Windows NT 3.5 brought with it a new software called "regedit". This tool replaced the antiquated and cumbersome Win.Reg file system on NT 3.5 systems. Version 5 Microsoft introduced the "Windows Registry Editor" in Windows 2000 version 5.0. This editor enabled third-party developers to directly edit the registry by adding, deleting, or modifying values. A number of problems with the Windows Registry in the previous version, including the Windows 95 and Windows 98 "registry hijack", are addressed in this version. Version 6 Microsoft Corporation introduced the Windows 2000 Advanced Server (previously code named "Vista") to Windows Server 6.0, to provide a new, more secure registry implementation. This functionality was first introduced with Windows XP Professional Service Pack 2. The Windows Registry Editor is included in Windows XP Media Center Server Edition 2005, Windows Server 2003 Service Pack 1, and Windows Server 2008 System Preparation Tool. Microsoft noted that Windows Server 2008 Standard Edition Service Pack 1 is the first version of Windows Server in a long time not to include the Windows Registry Editor. Version 7 Microsoft Corporation released Windows Server 2008 Service Pack 2 (Microsoft deemed Service Pack 2 for Windows Server 2008 Service Pack 1 obsolete), which introduced a number of registry changes. They include: Support for bulk HKEY_USERS entries; Support for HKEY_CURRENT_USER and HKEY_LOCAL_MACHINE includes and excludes; Support for bulk HKLM, HKCU, HKCR, HKUNPROP, and HKLOGON entries. Support for bulk HKEY_CURRENT_USER and HKEY_LOCAL_MACHINE entries
