The calculations are performed with the [wien2k]{} package [Blaha:wien2k:2001]. From the density matrix of this system we have performed a cluster analysis with the [gmpy]{} package [Guo2018]. The results for the specific heat and the entropy of the system are shown in Fig. [fig:S_tau], whereas we have indicated in the figure the representative points for which the $U=3.5$ eV and the $U=4.5$ eV, calculated using the method explained above. The corresponding information about the characteristic temperatures are given in Fig. [fig:T_tauU]. The system is well described by the LDA, with the entropy value obtained to be $S\sim 0.42$ eV/atom. Results and discussion {#sec:results} ===== We have performed the cluster analysis by taking the temperature as the control parameter. The obtained results are shown in Fig. [fig:S_tau]. As one can see, for each model there are two groups of points. For high temperatures there are only points corresponding to the metallic phase, with $S\sim 0.3$ eV/atom for the $U=3.5$ eV and $
