Knowing that there was another device on the loose and badly malfunctioning, Zarro goes to investigate.

It's a Trap is a 2005 horror film by British production company Subversive Films. It was written and directed by James Riley and stars Aaron Tveit, who won an ALMA Award for his performance as Justin. The film also stars Samantha Ellis, Melanie Nardini, Suki Waterhouse, Giovanni Ribisi and Douglas Hodge. Plot Justin, an American mechanical engineering student studying in London, meets an amnesiac woman named Jess in a pub, and they begin dating. While Jess tells Justin about herself, who she really is and how she got to where she is, they are attacked by some knife wielding maniac. Against their will, they both get knocked unconscious. Jess awakens and realizes that she has a daughter. She also realizes that she is trapped in the house of three teenaged captors. The trio consists of the eldest brother Tony, 15, who has developed a fixation with a homicidal drinking game, the kind of which leaves one dead in a certain amount of time. Tony has enlisted three of his friends in assisting him in committing the game. The middle brother Aidan is a flamboyant high school dropout who has undergone a post-Christmas religious conversion. Aidan reveals he is gay, but believes that his new religious values have made him happy since the incident. The youngest brother Brock, who is more physically violent than his two older bothers, suffers from Tourette's syndrome and some sort of fury compulsion, and is obsessed with his pet ferret, Brockie. The trio's house, where Tony and Aidan have been home for about a year, has gone through an extensive remodeling, including expanding the kitchen and ripping the living room into three rooms so they have more space. Jess soon finds, from some belongings of hers that Justin has left in the house, that they are being pursued by something, which only makes her feel more anxious. She is afraid of going out in the yard anymore, as she receives the crazies; or a pack of dogs, that appear as soon as she steps outside. Aidan becomes more and more angry with her for being afraid of the dogs when she is so profoundly unafraid of him. Having lost her phone, she requests to use Tony's to call her mother, who is at work. Tony locks her inside his room with him, while Brock and Aidan search for her phone. During the time that she is with Tony, who offhandedly gives her wine while drinking it himself,
