Is there a similar thing for ASCII? Also, if there is a similar program for ASCII, what are the similarities? A: Is there an ASCII version of the following? No. If there is a similar program for ASCII, what are the similarities? No idea. The program is probably a long way from being finished, let alone actually working. And if there is a similarly optimized program, the program is probably using a different approach that means there is little or no "similarity" to an ASCII version of the program. Also note that the term "ASCII version" is a bit strange; there's no "ASCII version" of any program; you can always use any programming language to perform the same task. If you want to do something in particular using the keyboard in "ASCII", just use a keyboard. Q: Set relationship to a node in a specific depth I would like to add a relationship between a node and its parent with a specific depth. For example, I have a parent node A that has a children node C1, C2 and C3. I want to add a relationship from A to C3, but not to C1 or C2. I have tried to do this using this node loop: $node = node_load(2); foreach($node->field_children as $child) { $node_node = node_load(0); $child->field_children[0]->target_id = $node_node->nid; $child->field_children[1]->target_id = $node_
