This is a gorilla themed ARPG set in a first person perspective. You play as a gorilla who one day was just walking through a forest and was caught by men wearing leather armor riding on horseback. After that gorilla is released the men head straight for a warehouse and kidnap gorillas from this warehouse and hold them captive in a field. You take on the role of a gorilla who was raised in captivity and your goal is to escape from the field in the warehouse. The gorillas have different strengths. Some have exceptionally high health, and some have the ability to call in other gorillas with health packs for themselves. You can build your own gorilla out of scrap, shoes, and dead gorillas to help you traverse the world. Once you're ready, you'll smash a bunch of humans in the process of killing them. Gorilla Tag is currently being developed by myself, and is in development on Windows 10. We currently have fully playable demos and we have a nifty mobile demo that can be played on Android and iOS. Gorilla Tag is Early Access, which means we're not quite ready to launch, but it's not going to be long. We're relying on feedback on our Early Access website for the next step, which is to work on the actual launch. Key Features: Nimble Physics System: You can throw objects with ease, catch on to walls and surfaces with ease, plus all basic physics effects are there. We plan on adding better physics effects like gravity, wind, and more in the future as well. Right now we just use basic physics. Smooth Transition System: You can enter and exit buildings from the outside and inside. We're currently doing this by getting players to click on the correct button on the outside of the building, and it works quite well. Realistic Ecology: The gorillas live in a simulated environment. When you travel, the environment changes and reacts to it. The gorillas react as well. It's kind of neat. Realistic Mechanics: In the course of the journey you pick up items and tools. You need to figure out how to use them appropriately, or you won't get very far. We're currently only using basic mechanics, but we plan on adding more mechanic features later on. RTS: At this stage there's not a lot to do in Gorilla Tag, but we're planning on adding unit units to come. Gorilla Tag is Early Access, which means we c9d1549cdd

What's new in Innocent VR:

is arriving at midnight (Pacific) right about now on steam. Much like the base game the DLC is a bit on the short side and with all the information it gets a good amount of in-game text between scenes. Torchlight 2: Legend of the Forsaken - All four The Forsaken heroes are coming out with a bundle of extras for the PC version. At the moment of writing this it looks like right on Steam you can get all four heroes in one bundle and it will cost you $1.99. Devil Daggers - Another title in GameFly's platforming series, Devil Daggers starts with three protagonists each with their own side quests and their own distinct gameplay. A clock is ticking and it's getting closer to the game ending. This could be one hell of an addition for the series. Jet Set Radio Future: Group of Ninjas - Would you like a cartoony kung fu ninja slash pixel-arting game? How about one full of shooting, racing, exploration, stealth and arcadey tricks and stunts? How about in three different game modes? This will definitely release in summer or early fall. Syphon Filter: DarkMirror 2 - A sequel to the 2007 Xbox 360 game in 2K's vicious future shooter series, Syphon Filter: Dark Mirror is a Canadian title that releases this summer (Septmeber or October). This game has been a long time coming but if this trailer is any indication of a great game, it looks like it's time for it. - SEGA Active-HD 2 - After the SEGA P3 not too long ago, another quality Playstation 3 game is coming out soon, the SEGA Active-HD 2. It's a hybrid game that will play like a normal console game but your character will move in real time on the Playstation 3. Radical Rabbit - The sequel to 2D action game, Radical Rabbit was announced and looks pretty darn great so far. The game plays similar to Ultra Hold'em, that was released in March 2011, but with crazy 80's style graphics and possibly a more fleshed out story. Diddy Kong Racing - The most colorful of the wonderful Crash Team Racing games is coming this fall to consoles. The game features one more player and tons of new tracks. I'm still looking for the best Crash Team Racing game that's for sure. Tomb Raider: Underworld - This year's reboot of the Tomb Raider franchise is coming to
