It is simple, easy to use and versatile. Also, it is the best printer for all kinds of medium to large projects. It can work either attached to your own computer, or when using it as a desktop stand-alone. It can create almost any printing size and type, and be programmed for a specific print which you can control with the ROBOTC software. I used to own and love the Makerbot Replicator 1, but now that I have the Replicator 2, I have a wider variety of prints to work with. The Replicator 2 prints by melting into a thin film of plastic. The plastic is melted in layers. By alternating layers of liquid and solid, each layer will harden before the layer above it. The whole process is repeated until you are finished with your project. This allows you to create a wide variety of intricate designs for a wide range of projects. Using the Makerbot Replicator 2 You just place your model into the Replicator 2; print your design, and get it out. Don't forget to let the printer cool down. To use it as a desktop printing device, you just place your model directly into the printer, set the temperature, and print. Setting up and using your model If you are looking for small projects, you can control your printing with the ROBOTC software program on your computer. You start from the beginning and make your way through each step. You can control the temperature of the extruder, the speed of the extruder, and the cooling of the body. For medium to large projects, you can use the Replicator 2 as a desktop stand-alone. Your software program will be different, but in general, you just plug your computer into the USB port and make your settings. Conclusion Like I said before, the Makerbot Replicator 2 is the best printer for medium to large projects. Not only is it versatile, but it's easy to use. It has a wide range of advantages: - Vers bc9d6d6daa
