Galactic Civilizations III is a strategy sandbox game where you play the role of an ambitious commander leading a starship, fleet or colony through the stars. You design your world and its empire, researching technologies to discover how to build your civilization into a powerhouse, exploring planets and anomalies to discover their resources and expand your domain, waging war and negotiating with other empires. I recently bought Galactic Civilizations III from Gamesplanet and this is the first and only game that I have bought from them. It was a fairly easy to navigate website and it was an easy process. The game itself was very easy to get into but I never got into the game. I gave it 3/5 for the price. It was around 200 dollars and a little more when I bought it. If your into point and click action this game is not for you. But, if your into the more strategic based game it is perfect. Best Strategy Game Seventeen years ago, the people of Earth sent their first exploratory expedition. This was the beginning of mankind's long voyage to the stars. The Space Age is here, and it is the era of the frontiersmen. It is the age of the Space Merchants, and of the pioneers. King Arthur's Gold is a role playing game where you play the hero in a fantasy realm. The game is played on a hexagonal grid where each hexagon is a 10x10 meters square. The gameplay of King Arthur's Gold is turn based. Alliance of Empires is a turn-based strategy sandbox, where you play the role of a powerful leader of a galactic empire. The game is set within the far future after inter-galactic warfare and colonization. Seen in the market for over a decade, Galactic Civilizations III is finally here! With the expansion pack Mercenaries, the game becomes even more strategic and fun than ever before. The game never felt so easy. Victory is your goal and it is everything you have ever wanted. In Galactic Civilizations III, you build a civilization from the ground up. Your empire rises on the ruins of others and you must use diplomacy, propaganda, science, and combat to make your way to the top. A gripping turn-based strategy game, Galactic Civilizations III takes you on a trip into the stars. Imagine, if you will, a future in which humanity has colonized the galaxy. A time when a space battle can be the last

You can find them in the different patches but some of them are so rare that after a try your precious Drones are just dead. I thought I had it figured out, but then I built another Drone Factory, this time with some very nice drones but to no avail. Hopefully by this time you will have a big collection of Drones and you can take a look on the

Galactic Civilizations III - Mercenaries Expansion Pack Crack With License Code (Latest)

Developed by Tribute Games to add new depth and intrigue to the award-winning sci-fi strategy game Galactic Civilizations III (GC3), Mercenaries expands the gameplay of GC3, adding more factions, more gameplay, new units, and a campaign. The expansion features new player factions, much improved AI, the new Galactic Bazaar system, hundreds of upgrades and improvements to all ships, technologies, and factions, a campaign to make you the next emperor, new music and victory celebrations, and the first new expansion since the original game was first released in 2008!Mercenaries is available from select digital retailers and for purchase directly through Steam.Mercenaries contains the following new features and content: A full campaign for four challenging main missions in which you must rebuild your empire after the Drengin Empire has destroyed it: What evil empire would sacrifice its own people and turn them into slaves? Galactics, that's who! The Drengin Empire has devoured untold numbers of human civilizations and has come to the aid of none of them. The Drengin Empire does not care what happens to the desperate people inhabiting this galaxy. The Drengin Empire has taken the bold step to use their own civilization's resources to build a vast army of humanoid beasts, armed with nuclear explosives, to consume an entire planet. The old word that stirs trepidation from all races in this galaxy is "Drengin". You know something needs to be done. Though the planet's own inhabitants have rejected their enslavement and have formed a resistance movement, they have little choice but to begin their fight against their new masters with meager resources. The Drengin Empire will feed on the same resources that help them grow. The "Great Expansion", as they call it, has increased production to 5,000, and from there, additional increases will be computed. However, the Drengin are not being hampered by a scarcity of raw materials. Rather, they use their advanced technology to increase production. The problem now is that their rapid expansion, while maintaining previous levels, is reducing the planet's natural resources. On top of that, they are using their own resources to increase the morale of their new slave personnel. The Drengin themselves are being drained. The Drengin Empire, both at their greatest and lowest, is now the strongest faction in the Galactics category. The overabundance of their resources and their ability to mass produce

REVIEWS 5 A must have for Galactic Civilizations 3. By: Mehmet Played on: PC (Steam) Reviewed On: 07/01/2018 THIS GAME IS THE BEGINNING OF GREAT GAME PLAY. It has resources, missions, adventures, campaign, and the map is huge. Creating the galaxy is easy just use any map editor that you prefer or use one of the Galactic Civilizations III map editor available in the Steam store. This game is all about building your empire. Want to have lots of workers on your planet? Build mining stations and aquafarms. Want lots of asteroids? Build ore extractors and refineries. Want to have lots of power? Build coal power plants. The possibilities are endless. The most important thing is don't overbuild. If you fill your districts with factories of something they will raise your production costs.

What's new:

Freshly captured, completely free, and ready to hire out their skills or sell their wares, the Mercenaries of the Galactic Civilizations III - Mercenaries Expansion Pack contain 12 new Galactic Civilizations III Mercenaries units. Mercenaries (called "envoys" in the first Galactic Civilizations), alongside the Federation and Empire, fill the needs of the most xenophobic civilizations. A mercenary battalion can be sent into battle against all but the most powerful enemies in any game, so the wily merchant or swordsman doesn't have to worry about negotiation as long as he has friends on his side. Mercenaries don't have any resources at all, so these quick and dirty units only field what they have in their pockets. Bargains are in effect and deals are done quickly. If a merc dies, he's gone for good and he returns to his homeworld after the mission. Less than a day later he returns with the spoils from the battlefield as well. Mercenaries are bought at any time, so mercs can make themselves indispensible over time. Alternatively, they can be purchased one at a time, so a merc or two can be donated to a friendly faction each turn. Mercenaries cannot be purchased from opponents, but their price is negotiable. Mercenaries deploy at these new Xenos worlds, pay their mercenary bounty, and continue to fight for the credit until the mission is over or the mercenary is killed. From the outset, pirates and wayfarers are also available from any vendor, and cannot be hired out by the player. Mercenaries would add to the pirate and wayfarer-only strengths of either the Pacific or the African races. However, aren't paragons of dishonor and Earth's human-like fur thieves? They'd be a popular target for a mercenary force. Mercenaries are much stronger this time out, with full-strength units. They have larger numbers by default, but they do not roll health as normal units. As with other additions to the game, Mercenaries are usually found in packs of two or three at a time. One unit represents a whole warband, an army, a battalion, or unit whatever. Two units represent a compliment of special abilities, or an elite warband. Three units is a power combination of units to add to the number of recruits for example. Stocks of other units for an empire, or of buildings for neutral fleets are no longer needed for the Mercenaries.
