Senate Minority Leader Charles E. Schumer said Thursday that Democrats want the partial government shutdown to end as soon as possible so that they can begin to focus on other issues, including immigration, but also health care. The government shut down for 16 days earlier this month after House Republicans and President Trump failed to strike a deal on funding for border security and President Trump’s proposed wall along the U.S.’s southern border. Democrats control the House and have the power to end the shutdown without the help of Republicans. Schumer announced the proposed legislation on the Senate floor Thursday, saying: “The shutdown should end now. Congress must protect the government so we can get to work on the kinds of issues that people want us to get to work on.” The legislation would provide $1.3 billion for border security and the government must reopen by Feb. 16. Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman Richard J. Durbin, D-Ill., and Budget Committee Chairman Patty Murray, D-Wash., proposed legislation that would only fund the Department of Homeland Security at current funding levels until Feb. 16. Schumer added, “We also want to pass the FIRST STEP Act as soon as possible. This bill is an important step forward on immigration, it is an important step forward on fighting the opioid epidemic, and it is an important step forward on providing disaster relief funding.” The legislation would make it easier for the government to deport undocumented immigrants and to make it easier for some convicted felons to gain citizenship. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., has expressed an interest in passing legislation this month that would open some portions of the government with money for border security and, at the same time, fund the ObamaCare program. Democrats have pushed back on President Trump’s demands for $5.7 billion to build a wall on the border. A congressional border security commission, which Trump created in December, does not have the power to make actual construction and funding decisions, and Democrats are concerned that funding for the wall will get tied up in the courts. Fox News’ John Roberts, Chad Pergram and The Associated Press contributed to this report. This is a change of pace and a departure from previous practice. But it's not the first time we've made a significant change, beginning in 1979, to make it easier for the public to comment on aldermen. A listing of alder
