We can help you with cheap organic. A population-based study of HIV infection among young women in South Africa. The aim of the study was to estimate the incidence and prevalence of HIV infection among women aged 15-25 years in two areas of South Africa. Analysis of data from three population-based HIV sentinel surveillance systems was used to calculate incidence and prevalence estimates. In all, 11.0 million women aged 15-25 years were included in the analysis, which was about 7% of the female population. Incidence rates estimated with the incidence-based method were 6.6, 5.4 and 4.5 per 1,000 women per year for HIV infections acquired between 1992 and 1997 in Durban and KwaZulu-Natal and outside Durban (excluding KwaZulu-Natal), respectively. The incidence rate for HIV infection acquired outside Durban was higher than in other urban areas. The prevalence of HIV infection was 11.3% in Durban and 10.9% outside Durban. Estimated HIV prevalence for each survey year, when controlled for age, was higher than was expected by the incidence-based method. This suggests that prevalence is higher than the incidence-based method predicts and that confounding by misclassification is of importance./* * Licensed to Elasticsearch under one or more contributor * license agreements.
