"It's bad enough to be the lesser evil and having your name up there in that context, they've also demeaned them and have made them look like what they have become. "I've been inundated with calls from people who have taken this sitting down. It's really hit people right across the board," she said. "My guess is that there'll be a massive flood of teaching aids that use this as a jumping off point, but basically, the left is saying that the tea party is racist and we're sitting here doing their dirty work for them." A spokeswoman for the Black Caucus said that the congressman failed to fulfill his obligation to be informed on the issues and his voting record. She said that he now may face "outrage and disdain" by Democrats and the group. "It's going to be a snowball effect from here. I'm aware of 12 senators who are going to go after him," she said. Being a lifelong manhwa/anime fan, I wanted to try my hand at penning a manga. Add to the mix, I am also a very big fan of games - and making games is my dream job. I decided to combine my 2 great passions together. I wanted the Game to combine the game elements of a "Manga" to make my dream come true. When I created Shin Chan, the animation side of it was first, then the writing, then the game development. This is how I started this adventure. I've developed the ability to hire and use a team of people, and call on them for assistance when needed - but having said that, whenever I see something that I think is going to be a difficulty problem or maybe a fun challenge, I'll make sure to tell them to go for it. So there's never been a shortage of ideas and challenge within the development stages for "Shin Chan". I've also made something that I've been wanting to do for a long time. I've always wanted to add a story to one of my games. So when I was putting together Shin Chan 2, I thought "Why not make a full blown story with dialogue?" I can't just post a spoiler here, so I will say that it has something to do with "Shin Chan" and "Shin Chan 2" That's not it, though. When I did the "Shin Chan Stories" a year ago, I was still getting my bearings. I was experimenting, figuring out what I wanted to do. I also learned a lot from the feedback I received and eventually I started to feel more confident about taking it as far as I can with the "Shin Chan" series. There is more coming, but I am currently busy with the development of "Shin Chan 2". That's it for now, I hope you guys are looking forward to my upcoming game. Game Features: Romance and comedy Fantastic story Huge variety of characters Funny characters Combat system Lots of levels Lots of unlockables Long term game campaign Flashy animations Plenty

What's new:

ina Microscope Micah H. Hung is a professor at the University of Washington specializing in light and electron microscopy as well as general solid-state materials research. After a postdoctoral position with the McKinlay research group at Princeton University, Hung was a faculty member at Johns Hopkins University, where he was an organizer of the Department of Biochemistry and Molecular Biophysics and directed the Center for Structural Bioengineering. He is the current director of the UW Center for Advanced Study in the Health Sciences.

Andrew Molteni: [For Hung], what's the coolest thing that you've been able to see with this microscope that you couldn't imagine seeing before? Micah H. Hung: I have been in the solid-state optics business as a researcher for about 50 years and looking down the optic path which goes from the sample to the optics to the detector has been a continuing source of new ideas. I am fortunate that it is possible to make breakthroughs in our understanding of the energy levels of the universe, the origins of time and even the birth of the universe. With this microscope you can take a tiny crystal of lithium niobate and actually see it as a light-millipede with billions of optical modes as it moves across the face of the detector. This is amazing. It can be applied to imaging and we have a tool that gives you a picture with sub-micrometer resolution, it allows imaging of live bacteria, viruses and even single molecules.

Andrew Molteni: What are the limitations of what you can do with it? Micah H. Hung: I would say one limit of what we can do is that you can now image a single, magic molecule, but you cannot make an actual living cell out of it. The observations have shown that it can be made of glass and plastics, but you cannot make a living thing of it.

Andrew Molteni: [Laughs] How long ago did you get this instrument? Micah H. Hung: We just got it, and it will be used primarily for the university's labs. It was manufactured by Carl Zeiss, a very respected high-end microscopy company.

Andrew Molteni: What kind of people

I think everyone in Washington State University is very excited by this microscope. The physics departments of
