Image copyright Getty Images Abortion rates in England have dropped to a record low, a study suggests. The latest official figures from the Office for National Statistics (ONS) show 4,340 terminations took place in England in 2018-19. This is the lowest level since similar records began in 1968-69, a drop of 19% on the previous year. Although abortions have fallen over the last decade, the number of the procedure is still at its highest level since 2012-13. The figures show that in England and Wales, 9,176 terminations took place in 2018-19, compared with a record high of 9,775 in the year to September 2018. The increase was driven by a rise in termination for social reasons, up from 3,223 in the previous year to 3,304 in 2018-19. It is the first time more than three-quarters of terminations were for social reasons - women who have a serious relationship break-up, for example. The figures also show a slight rise in terminations for medical reasons from 13,193 in the previous year to 13,570. However, the proportion of terminations performed between 20 and 24 weeks has dropped from 35.5% to 34.3%, amid fears that pregnant women are choosing earlier abortions.
