: spacecraft emerging from dark dust cloud to witness Earth, lunar and Mars fly-by Syrtis Major is a 15,000 square mile mass of dust and ice large enough to dwarf the planet Pluto Main belt of asteroids also contains remnants of the original'solar system' which are believed to be remnants of an early planetary system and which have been thrown far away Scientists believe the asteroid will eventually collide with Earth or Mars Concrete evidence is now available that suggests humans actually lived on Earth at one time and may have even escaped from it, newly- released evidence suggests. The claim comes in the form of a stunning explanation of how mankind managed to'maroon' itself on the planet for a period of 700,000 years, providing convincing insights into what the Earth was like then. The startling discovery makes a mockery of the popular theory that we have been around for 4.5bn years. New evidence suggests that the Earth was once a hospitable place, when animals looked like this. The theory is that life on the planet was not entirely cut off by our time but recycled The 600lb pile of smashed rock which originally came from the Moon is so dense there is a 50 per cent chance it could totally destroy any lander as the process is repeated 21 times What is perhaps even more astonishing is that flying over the Earth, the team of scientists around the world witnessed the Moon hovering near on the horizon - as if wanting to say: 'It was all worth it'. The astonishing find, and the theory explaining it, was derived from a strange piece of meteorite, one of a cargo container of shattered wreckage that appeared in the skies of the Small Magellanic Cloud in 1995. Moreover, the scientists realised the container was mistaken for a meteorite even though their instruments on the Space Shuttle Discovery could clearly see through the container. French scientists examined it after the flight and found it contained up to half a million fossils of creatures that lived two billion years ago. But they were baffled by its origins - why were they there? These images were taken by the Hubble Space Telescope in February 2004, when a series of comets came back into orbit around the Sun It was a mystery they could not solve and so didn't do anything with. The tiny black dot in the middle-ground of this image is Mars The hazy

The A-10s fired approximately 19 weapons at a total of 2,225 rounds, successfully supporting the ground troops on the eastern flank of the fight around Aviano and in support of the forward artillery observation assets. A-10C Tank Killer The use of the A-10C in the 1991 Gulf War and Operation Desert Storm is legendary. Also, the A-10 has been credited with having helped the Allies win the Battle of Habbaniya in 2003. The A-10s (and similar SU-27) with the FIM-92 Stinger, the Stingray, performed well in the 1991 Persian Gulf War when the MiG-25 pilots, who lacked radar-homing missiles to counter them, were forced to fly on instruments alone. This scenario was repeated during Operation Desert Storm in 1991
