DROD: The Second Sky is a turn-based strategy game where you take on the role of a young adventurer haunted by a swirling storm of dark towers. In these mobile dungeons, known as rooms, you will face a series of increasingly challenging puzzles as you guide a small party of adventurers through a variety of lush and varied locales. This is a game that emphasizes powerful, randomized gameplay elements, and a lovingly crafted graphical experience. The gameplay is turn-based, meaning that every player spends their turns moving, fighting, casting spells, and/or acquiring additional information. Every key action — every move, every movement, every turn — affects the game and the events surrounding it. Key Features: Turn-based strategy game with multiple game modes. Over 500 puzzle rooms organized around 17 distinct puzzle element types. Created by an international team of passionate designers and developers. Playable on Windows and Mac OS X. Can be played without DRM restrictions. Over 250,000 unique level rooms created by our players! Rated "Mature" by the ESRB. The powerful custom scripting and user-modification features 1:35:35 = thirty seconds per turn; 4:1 = four turns per minute. THE FOUR THINGS THAT MAKE A GREAT MONSTER When The Second Sky was made in late 2006, we looked at DROD and all of its predecessors as the start of a new era for this series. The world has always been chock-full of monsters. There are, at least, two exceptions to that, and we are proud to announce the development of Monsterpedia, an in-depth database of monsters. Monsterpedia's goal is to be the first place to go when you need to know the physical, mental and psychological properties of a particular monster, so that you can better plan for your encounters and respond accordingly. Monsterpedia is under active development with a goal of becoming the definitive source for everything you need to know about monsters. So far, we've got 20,000 monsters from all of the games in our database! The Monsterpedia team (no, we didn't name it ourselves) has also recently started a Kickstarter project to crowdfund the creation of the remaining 20,000 monsters so that the database can be finished. In the meantime, monsters are going to pop up in our games as we continue. Here's a look at the four things that make up a great monster: The Style and Look

EarthTongue is a charming point-and-click adventure, taking place on a remote space station that functions as a base of operations for orbiting alien probes. There, you wake to find that many of the station's native life forms have mysteriously disappeared. So how does this affect the life that your brought with you? This beautiful and whimsical game takes an interesting look at environmental science, exploring the effects of space radiation, and offers an immersive simulation experience for casual gamers. Exclusively available on iPad and Android tablet devices through the iTunes App Store and Google Play Store, respectively. EarthTongue brings delightfully gentle dialogue to a rich simulation in a classic point-and-click adventure format. Join the station's tiny denizens as they work to feed, grow, and socialize among themselves, while you explore their station and interact with the creatures in ways they expect. It's a relaxing, social experience that lets you take care of a small ecosystem consisting of different types of fungi and bugs. EarthTongue is a great casual simulation, but with surprising depth. The main character spends her days caring for the station's tiny denizens, and with carefully chosen animations and voice-overs, the experience feels very genuine and warm.

Key Features:

- * An emergent social simulation, where players are the main character
- * 3 character classes, each with unique skills, abilities and circumstances
- * Create and care for multiple types of terrestrial and space-born creatures to help you survive
- * Explore and engage with an alien station and its inhabitants
- * Play four different mini-games: Robot poker, Lifekeeper, Fungi and more
- * RPG elements that grant special bonuses and abilities to certain characters
- * Dialogues and mini-games rich with references to natural science
- * Atmospheric soundtrack composed by the indie-favorite indie composers Drew Silver and James Eggar
- * A high-quality touchscreen drawing interface
- * Over 35 unique puzzles, with a highly detailed map for solving them
- * An extensive device-specific tutorial for players new to the experience

About EarthTongue: The story in EarthTongue is inspired by science, technology, and nature. EarthTongue is designed as a documentary to teach children about the complex web of life, its interaction with the environment, and the beauty and importance of cooperation, friendship and overcoming adversity. It is based on several episodes in the life of a fictional space station that orbits an alien planet.

» Sad people say that the Wolf has no soul. Tell them how to get one. Game project: Check out the game on the itch.io page. I'll try to post there with the links to this thread when it's ready to release. If anyone is interesting in exploring more of Lupa or another game with me, I'll be around to develop them in the future. As this game is just about 50% done there is a lot to do. There is nothing for C++ developers, but there are many game-engines, frameworks, libraries and tools to choose from. My current favorite is C# Unity. Do keep in mind though, Unity is not easy to get into and the 3D-engine is very powerful. I'd also look into Pygame, which is much easier to use and get into. Not only that but you can use python to write all the game logic. A lot of engines nowadays support python as well. What I was looking for was feedback on my vision and what people would like to see in a game like Lupa. Your opinion matters more than mine. It would be great if you can share your thoughts with me. You can do so by commenting on this thread or the itch.io page. If there is anyone out there that wants to see more of Lupa or just some good stories told through games, I'll be around to help you out. Let me know what you think and if there is anything you want to see in Lupa or maybe a new game you'd like me to make. If there is anything in particular you want to see in Lupa, let me know and I'll put that in the game. If you want to see more of Lupa, then what about this wonderful writing you have to enjoy: I have made a small tutorial to help you get into the game. It's not in english unfortunately, but I can help you with that. If you want to know more about the game and how to get it on the itch.io page, check this link out: If you have any questions feel free to ask them. And happy exploring the world of Lupa. Will create the dialogues myself for now

What's new in Homeworld 3:

Okay, so forget about the whole “20 days in 20 parts” thing. You’re going to be thrown in at the deep end here, friend and frugaller. This is the part where I really hammer it into you that it’s not the best of signs for June to be your month! You know how sometimes your boyfriend or girlfriend can be a bit of a mother hen? (Not to be confused with the Hindi/Indian mother once referred to as an English Mother Hen). Well, in my experience, this is the result of a wedding with a guest list far too big to allow for proper refreshments. Mother hen. Let’s just hope that your current relationship isn't like this, so you can keep going, and maybe put some flour in the oven to bake cake later (yes, believe it or not, we're coming). Two dozen friends and family can often lead to wasted opportunities. But this year, I'm going to help you. Using my own experiences of throwing a June wedding - I've done it before - I'm going to give you a sort of "Mary Poppins"-style nudge in the right direction. But you're going to have to work at it. It's easier with cake but you can do the whole thing with naps (and bread). So, to start us off, I'm going to tell you a story. Sorry you have to know this one, but it is now your brief. Story time: the musician I was sent out on my first wedding in May and I did my research by email. I saw the website and then the bridal magazines. I envisioned the beautiful people and their adorable kids. Families standing together. All love and smiles. It was contagious. I wanted it. In time, just like in real life, things happened that interrupted the course of events. Things like, "these pants are too tight" and "it's time to eat dinner" and "WHY ARE ALL THESE MEN IN MY HOME?!" And then I started to worry. For me, the anxious period started when my parents came to live with me for a week in June (four weeks before the wedding, I've never understood why parents do that). This is when I realized I

Reply to: THE PATIENT TO DO ANY CASE-STUDIES. WHAT TO ATTACH. IN WHOM DOES IT BENEFIT YOU TO BE? CREATE A USEFUL ARTICLE TO HOW TO COMPLETE A CASE STUDY This is a short article. It is meant to teach you to get started on your first case-study. You will need to have experience to complete a complete case study. Each case-study should have all three ages (baby, toddler, pre-schooler). You will need to become the parents. You will also need to become the teacher. You will also need to learn about Sociology and to be a stand up parent. I use a novelty advertising book to write the case-study. This is a great material to do case-studies. It comes with review questions as well as the case itself. You can purchase the book at Amazon. I read the book in large letter in blocks so I had to put some kind of mark inbetween, which I did with a little cross centered between large blocks in red and green. I looked at each age individually. I ended up giving each child a project. The overall theme is the same across the ages. In each case, the project is what the child was most interested in. I found this out by talking to and

looking at the child. I then put together a project overview with the individual elements that were a part of the project. This way the project had really wide scope. I recommend that you write one or two case-studies first and cut your teeth on that as a process.
