A connecting portion for connecting a battery charging cable is provided at a connection port of the electric vehicle battery. The connection port has a shape in a depth direction along the direction in which cables are to be inserted and connected. However, a shape of the connection port changes in the depth direction depending on the connection method of the battery charging cable. As such, the electrical connection terminal is disposed between a first end, where the connection port is formed, and a second end, where an external connection terminal is formed. The electrical connection terminal has a two-piece mold structure which includes a first electrical connection terminal for connecting a first cable (one of cables, connected to the connection port), and a second electrical connection terminal for connecting a second cable (the other cable, connected to the connection port). The first electrical connection terminal of the electrical connection terminal is stably supported by a first support part and a connecting plate which are disposed at a first end of the electrical connection terminal and are in contact with the first end of the electrical connection terminal, thus being protected. Meanwhile, the second electrical connection terminal of the electrical connection terminal is stably supported by a second support part, a third support part, and a connecting plate which are disposed at the second end of the electrical connection terminal and are in contact with the second end of the electrical connection terminal, thus being protected. Meanwhile, the first support part and the second support part are connected to the connecting plate connected to the first end and the second end, respectively. The first support part and the second support part have a staircase shape, wherein a slope portion which allows the second electrical connection terminal to be stably supported over a predetermined interval is formed. As such, in the related art, two-piece support structure for the electrical connection terminal is formed to suppress the electrical connection terminal from being inwardly bent (bent toward one direction) due to an external force applied from the first support part and the second support part which are provided between a first end of the electrical connection terminal and a second end thereof. Field of the Invention This invention relates to a film forming composition and a process for forming a film, which comprises forming a film by dip coating or the like of a coating solution of the film forming composition and drying the coated film. More particularly, the invention relates to a film forming composition and a process for forming a film, which is suitable for the formation of a film having a chemical resistance, corrosion resistance and wear resistance, especially, a film with a surface having a mirror-like luster by the dip coating method. 2. Description of the Prior Art A conventional process for forming a film comprises the steps of providing a solution of a film forming composition in a suitable solvent; coating the solution of the film forming composition on a substrate to form a film of the film forming composition; and drying the coated film. The chemical resistance, corrosion resistance and wear resistance of the film depends on the quality of the film, and the process has been optimized to form a film having a chemical resistance, corrosion resistance and wear resistance. For example, a solution of a conventional organic polysiloxane is coated on a substrate in an organic solvent such as toluene to form a film of a polysiloxane (for example, a compound having the formula: ##STR2## wherein each of $R.sup.1$ and $R.sup.2$ is a monovalent organic group) (see U.S. Pat. No. 3,248,382). The polysiloxane has very poor chemical resistance, and the film formed by the conventional process has an insufficient chemical resistance. Further, a dip coating process is extensively used for forming a film of a coating composition on a substrate. However, the film formed by the conventional dip coating process has a low chemical resistance and a low surface hardness. The object of the present invention is to provide a film forming composition having an improved solubility and a

I used the following non-limiting example as it comes standard with JACK and I split it into two partitions: [b]NVIDIA GTX 1080 GPU (Onboard)[/b] [b]SAMSUNG 256GB USB 3.1 REVERAND (External)[/b] Install NVIDIA CUDA Toolkit GPU Support The environment can get messy after you've installed CUDA Toolkit 3.1 with NVIDIA drivers earlier than that of your NVIDIA graphics card. A clean unix-like operating system with bash is not required, just make sure you have a compiler and C++, you won't be needing a compiler for this. Open a terminal and change the path in bashrc to see it. Type the following in your terminal: root's path=/... After you've run the installer, you'll have to manually install the driver for your card. You can do so by typing: sudo nvidia-375 This is the example of a GTX1070 onboard graphics card. Install GPU Support Simply login to your computer and keep in mind that even though the following command references a $(CC) compiler, you will need to have an NVIDIA CUDA Compiler installed in order for the install of the Open Source AMD Compute Library such as AMDGPU-PRO to succeed. sudo apt-get install build-essential sudo apt-get install ncurses

The Dreamcast is a classic, in every sense of the word. It was the first system to hit retail, it had games that were fun, it was powerful, and it did a lot of things right. It also had games that were absolute stinkers. The Dreamcast is much more popular now than it was when it was released, due to nostalgia and a market that grew, but also due to the fact that it was the first system to be considered truly "next generation" when it came to hardware. On the software side of things, the Dreamcast had some
