Written by Free Press staff writer "The two top issues facing the country are health care and energy," said Bernie Shavola of Westbrook, the Libertarian Party candidate for governor. "I don't think we have the best system in this country for either one." Gov. John Lynch last week vetoed five pieces of legislation that sought to improve health care. His most recent bill required people who opt for Obamacare to first obtain a policy from a state-approved insurer. The second bill would have capped any cost-reduction policies, including those that would make insurance more affordable for low-income individuals. (Page 2 of 2) Lynch vetoed that legislation, along with the two that would have helped people pay their rent. Shavola argued the two-term governor will get re-elected because of the economy, which he said remains "fairly strong." But if not for health care, it would be "much worse," he said. State Senate President Therese Murray declined to comment about Shavola's candidacy but praised the Legislature's work on the Affordable Care Act. It passed the Legislature this year, only to be vetoed by Lynch. Murray said Lynch is "doing what we wanted and what most people voted for." Nationally, Libertarian Party candidate Gary Johnson is having success in the polls as former New Mexico Gov. Johnson prepares to appear in October's presidential debates. Johnson has a double-digit lead over other candidates, including Hillary Rodham Clinton, whose health care plan is similar to that vetoed by Lynch.

Shavola, a former state senator from New Hampshire, said the health care debate is affecting voters' choice. "It seems like a natural fit with what Libertarians believe in," he said, but added that the Libertarian Party needs a more "robust" statewide presence. Shavola plans to help raise funds in September, when he will begin campaigning full-time. He has raised about $300,000 so far, which he said is less than half of the more than $1 million that is being raised to be spent by Democrats this year.

® 2016 Referee and Linesperson Handbook $299.00 Stock# OFHXF241 Share this: Reduce poor performance by all, teach, and measure. A Close Call By Victoria Sutherland If referee and linesperson aren't use to close calls, then this book is for them. To them, this will be a challenge to learn, but they will find the information contained in these chapters just as fascinating as I have. This new edition of the Red Cross Cross Numbers® 2016 Referee and Linesperson Handbook is written to meet the needs of today's experienced and emerging professionals. This new edition includes additional material on rules topics such as in-hole/off-track fouls, roughing the puck, lateral-zone fouls and face-off fouls to name a few. New techniques and tools are presented every chapter, written in easy to read language, and illustrated with color photos. The line of reasoning that drives the entire book is simply, teach better to improve. There is a lot of information inside these pages. In this book you will learn five chapters of practice drills, many practice strategies and special techniques to improve performance. You will also learn how to select and use coaches and referees to improve performance. Videos and photos are sprinkled throughout the book to reinforce learning. As you read the pages and make practice choices, you will come to the realization the results you get from practice will drive your decision making at the game. This leads to better performance at the game. Tony Wright's training style is made to help you improve performance as a referee and linesperson, gain understanding of the rules, and help you identify contact between players and apply the rules appropriately. You will develop a good understanding of the rules through clearly written steps and explanations. The results that come from the exercises and tools will be motivational. Like the tight end that actually plays the game in the middle of the field, learning how to use coaches and referees will provide motivational resources to improve your game. About Tony Wright Born and raised in London, England, Tony Wright has over 32 years of experience in the sport of sports officiating in many different levels, including the start of his national career in 1984 in the far-off realm of "international officiating." Tony's long service to the hockey community includes coordinator of the International Ice Hockey Federation hockey task forces
