SAN FRANCISCO (KGO) -- State lawmakers passed a bill that would require all California gun owners to obtain a permit to carry a concealed firearm. The controversial bill now heads to the desk of Gov. Gavin Newsom for consideration.The new law passed 30-5. Three Republicans opposed it.Governor Newsom has now said he will sign it into law.The biggest difference between this bill and others he has vetoed is that this one does not require people to show a legitimate reason why they are walking around with a gun. The California Rifle & Pistol Association says if the governor signs the bill, it will stop the flow of guns."The law that's on the table today is a contrived gun control, a flawed gun control, and it's based on fear and lies," the group's vice president told ABC7 News. "It lacks of common sense."About two dozen gun rights supporters protested outside the State Capitol on Wednesday.The National Rifle Association said while it is true that the permit would be good for research purposes, the NRA's lobbyist testified that they did not intend for the data to be used for restricting the right to carry a firearm."We do not believe that a permit that grants an individual the ability to carry a concealed firearm for the sole purpose of conducting a survey of the

That seems to be the crowd condition for the first weekend of Canadian band ASPHALT JELLY's new album, See What You Started. The band's third LP came out last month and sees the band more firmly entrenched in "delivering pure as fuck indie rock" territory. Which is fine, they've always been pretty good at making music that is danceable and catchy and funny and smart, but this album brings a more refined sense of where the band is at, and what they sound like when they're at their best. And that's really where the album resides, at its best, when the band is on its most inspired, melodic, songwriting form. For a band like ASPHALT JELLY, it's not always clear whether they're in the midst of a really inspired moment, or if it's just the result of a long and difficult creative process. See What You Started was recorded at Baron Studios and mastered at Quarq in New York City. But while they sound entirely different here than they had in the past (if that makes sense), there are a couple of things that remain constant. Their sense of melody is really sharp. "See You're Another's Joy" is a perfect example, where they break out of the post-grunge territory into something akin to "Lazy Sunday", the song that was the original seed to this record. And the melodies are just so catchy and charming that you'll find yourself singing along at some point even if you don't immediately notice the pop hooks that are going on. Another thing that comes across consistently is ASPHALT JELLY's knack for creating hooky, sing-along choruses. Whether it's a particularly likable opening couplet on "Fingerplay" or the repeated "Wait, what?" on "Girl We're Good", you'll find yourself singing along to these hooks whenever the band hits them. And then, when they hit that 1cdb36666d

Kutools For Excel 19.00 Crack With Keygen.Lights, camera, action! At least, that's what a recent study published in The Journal of Gastroenterology & Hepatology (JGH) suggests. It's long been known that coloring the experience of food can make us enjoy it more. But those color effects are pretty subtle. The study looked at frozen yogurt in bright, pastel flavors, with chocolate sprinkles and rainbow sprinkles. The three versions looked pretty similar. Which one would you pick? The pink one. Indeed, it was the blue one that we picked ourselves, even though we knew it was the red one. But no matter — we probably wouldn't have picked the red one either. The researchers hypothesized that this phenomenon was due to the fact that pastels, in general, make people more relaxed and calmer. If food is associated with relaxing moments, we then associate it with tranquility and make it our go-to indulgence. "When we look at pastel-colored foods, this might be associated with more mild emotions," says Jane Wardle, Ph.D., the study's senior author and a professor of psychology
