Hope you enjoy the collection and provide feedback. Enjoy. A: Thanks for sharing your work, I enjoyed reading the narratives, illustrations and modeling. First of all, the models are well done and you really captured the 'narrative' of the battles. I think the likeness is really good, especially in the arms and armor department. I enjoyed reading the narration and thought it would be an interesting endeavor to convert the narrations into a movie. It would require some heavy scripting and production work. The following 3 sections have something significant to say about 'the battle'. War Although the two story-lines share the common element of the battle, both are about the war. They both are about the people in a battle, and thus the deployment of land/air/sea forces. The first story deals more about the fight between the Air Forces vs. the ground forces while the second story deals more about the fight between the land-based forces vs. the air force. I like the first one better because the viewer never sees the battle from an air-perspective and instead only sees one side. The second story
