Dave was standing still, with water flowing down. He looked at the sink and thought that he could clean a few things up. He smiled a bit when he realised that this was a commercial. He would get paid. Then he thought about the requirements. He would have to jump to avoid an obstacle, run to pass an obstacle, and make a tank full of milk. He ran to the left. He ran to the right. He started jumping over the obstacles. A few seconds later he hit the sink. A second later the camera pulled back, and he looked at himself in the mirror. "Crap!" He thought. "I'm not even in the game. How can I get a score on something that I'm not doing?" He thought. Then he remembered the tutorial, and started to press the buttons. "Wait a minute!" He thought, "I can't play with this controller. I'm not using this controller!" So he used his iPhone. He clicked and tapped on the touchscreen. It was hard to play with. It was slow and annoying. After a few minutes he got frustrated. He wanted to quit playing. "Wait! Wait! Wait!" He thought. Then he saw something on the bottom. "I can touch the screen to make the thing work." He thought. He was thrilled. "This is easy!" He thought. "I can use this. It's so easy!" Then he touched the bottom of the screen. "Ha! It's working!" He thought. "That's cool." He started to concentrate on the game. He remembered the controls. The touch of the screen will turn the buttons into left and right movements, and the jumping will become possible. Then he started to think about the level design. He could switch directions, and he could jump. That would make it more interesting. He started to get a bit more excited when he remembered the timer. Every time he hit the cow, he got a number of points. Then he started to wonder how the game would end. He started to think about the credits. Would there be a big finale with many stars? Or would it be a simple end? "I think I'm going to win!" He thought. "Let's see!" He started to concentrate on the game. He remembered the controls. The touch of the screen will turn the buttons into left and right movements, and the jumping will

In the world of Talisman, there is no border between The Us and the Elven kingdom of Glis. However, both kingdoms share a tumultuous, centuries-long history of unresolved conflicts and hidden secrets. And such unresolved conflicts lead to eternal resentment, and sometimes to open civil war. The Tovars Kingdom is one of the few peaceful unions created from the ashes of the last conflicts. Hint: In the Tovar Kingdom there is a castle of the once mighty Vauris family. It looks well-protected in the middle of the world-famous Cova Beuqueta, yet the servant who inhabits it has never seen anyone for over a hundred years. Explore the old halls and towers of the castle, discover the mystery behind the locked doors, spend time of the secret passages, solve the puzzles in the decayed room, and live in the fantasy world of your imagination. Qunari: Space Rangers The elite of the Space Rangers' elite, the Qunari have been forbidden to take a human form and live on Earth. They are the rulers of the galaxy and their armies have destroyed every human race that dared to challenge them, but despite their power they are still deeply fearful of their own mortality. When the Vauris of Tovar failed to stop the return of the Great Enemy, the Qunari sent a missive to their commanders across the galaxy, commanding them to stay away from the birth star of humanity. Those that disobeyed were sent to a penal colony, but one by one they were executed... until only one remains. Rise of the Qunari The Qunari are a very old race, they date back to the first days of humanity's birth on Earth. They're the people who brought mankind to the stars. And as the only form of sentient life in the universe, they are capable of making decisions and seeing them through, so they always choose the path of humanity's future. Their origins are unknown, though historians speculate that they are nearly as ancient as the Old Ones, and possibly even older. For over ten thousand years they followed their mother-planet, planet Earth, and all that have lived there. It was their duty to protect it from the Great Enemy, who has tried for millennia to disturb its tranquility. Hundreds of countless generations of Qunari were born on Earth, fought side-by-side with the fledgling peoples of the world, and died in the name of the
