Here's a 9 point, 55 yard rushing performance that the 2013 DE prospect should have had with him: "If your father was dumb and your mom was ugly, you'd better run fast." - "Bears" Coach Lou Holtz

OkieNation.com is the place to talk about Oklahoma State Football and OSU football recruiting. Join the discussion by registering now and adding your comment (you'll just need to click on the link next to the picture to get the feeling with the next coming season. Pelini is a beast and he needs to be running his team the same way WV did from years past. The O-line is good but I wouldn't put all the blame on them. I just hope that we don't have a repeat of the 2008 season where we were so inconsistent. The fact that we are even having this discussion is a joke. You can have the best running back in the nation but if you don't have the best QB in the nation then your just a good all-around team. We have a very good QB who can play with anyone and our running game has plenty of talent. If we don't develop a good defense (which won't be easy with all the new guys) then we have a problem. But I love how people are pretending that our main problem is our running game. We have elite talent at each spot (with the exception of safety) and our offense is going to be absolutely filthy next year. I feel like we will have a killer offense. I've been feeling this as well, as well as a top ranked recruiting class, but I also feel that the O will be OK with a shaky defense. If not, bowl season will likely be over. OSU's offense is going to be absolutely filthy next year. It's just going to be a waiting game to see how these guys perform on the field. You have to wonder what kind of ground and pound McElwain can install considering he's not a college OC and never has been. I think going all out will be the best way to attack OSU's aggressive D. I like Boulware, but if we can add a veteran end, DE or OLB to be a disruptive force, this could be a huge game. I feel like we will have a killer offense. We'll be fine. How many "Carbs" posts are we going to have every time they want to
