What's New In?

=====
Two regular expressions can be applied at the same time: 1. one to test (isValid) 2. the other to match (matches) These two processes must be done at the same time. The result is given by displaying the message "OK" in green if it is valid, and "Invalid pattern" in red if not. The feature has been added to our new version, RegEx Lite pro, which is more powerful and has a complete suite of visualisations. For more information about RegEx Lite visit: www.regular-expressions.info/regex v 2.0 Lite released... New content: - very handy view of a regular expression, highlighted in red if there is a match - visualisation of a regular expression inside the editor Updated to be compatible with Visual Studio 2010. Now, if an expression is invalid, you will get a popup window with the message "Invalid pattern" when you try to copy an expression into the visualisation box. Thank you for the good feedback and all the support I received! Thank you to all the people who report bugs. I hope that RegEx Lite is useful for you and I am looking forward to your suggestions! MultiRegEx Lite Showing 1 comment Thanks for this tool. I would still like to see, however, a "regular expression" popup, in the upper right corner, that would clearly, concisely, and briefly tell me what each character in a regular expression does, instead of having to click on each character to get the explanation. Other than that, thanks for the excellent work. Thank you for your feedback, it's really appreciated! You can already display the description of a regular expression in the editor, simply click on it to see the details. When you click on the regular expression to copy it, you will get a message saying "Invalid pattern". You can do this by going to the "Options" tool window by pressing F4, and then select "Copy to editor" when you are in the editor. Regards, I've already tried this tool, and it is really great! So I've decided to support you financially! ;) Thank you very much for all your great work on this tool! I hope you continue to have a great future!
