What's new:

It was daylight when I awoke for the first time that morning. Stretching out, I started to get up but quickly remembered with a start what was going on. "Impossible!" I said. "I'm not in my apartment, and I'm not wearing my clothes. And you're not me. You must be a dream, like the rest of this story." "I know how you feel," I heard in my voice. "I did the same thing to myself when I was kidnapped. The same thing that you're feeling, to put it mildly." "What? What happened?" I said. "You were abducted and brought here." He responded. "There was a bunch of cars in the middle of the road, many of which you recognized as being yours, and I was in a car, but I don't remember where, and there were other cars. I remember that I was with Laemel, and the driver was in another vehicle, but I don't remember who was with me." "Wait. You mean you've been here the whole time?" I said in puzzlement. "Yeah, well, I guess there's still parts of me here. So how was it that you got here? Did you come here yourselves?" Laemel asked. "I don't know," I said. "I came with the other girl, but I cannot remember her name. She was crying, but I cannot remember her screams because I was too scared to look back at her. Then, suddenly, the car stopped, and the big dark creature grabbed me, and we flew through the air." "That's right," Joel said. "For whatever strange reason, you think you must of been not alone in your kidnapping, because we saw a bunch of cars flying through the air too." "But I've never been up in a car," I said. "That was the first and only time." "The most recent one, to be exact," he said. "What happened after we went up in the air?" I asked. "Well, we landed in this weird place, without explanation, and in the middle of a blizzard," Laemel said. "Then there were heads in the middle of the road, blocking the way to a small domed structure, like the entrances of those places you see in movies. And we walked through the crowd, and there
