Sprite Generator is an easy way to quickly create thousands of unique, procedurally generated sprites for use in video games and other visual media. With a simple user interface, you can quickly create your sprites, then export the entire sprite set, or export sprites from individual sprites. The player can move and rotate sprites by a simple interface, and you can freely tweak the sprite colors with a color palette editor. Features: Export sprite sheet or individual sprites Bulk or individual export Sprite Editor Export color palette Import sprites or palette files Create sprites from the color palette Quickly create millions of unique sprites Create your own sprite engine Enhance the colors of single sprites and bulk export Built-in editor for palette Create single sprites and work on multiple sprites at the same time The game engine is based on C# and OpenTK, a cross-platform API library for OpenGL. It was made from scratch and designed to be easily extended, with various game objects. The downside of this fast development approach is that bug fixing is more difficult. We're in the process of refactoring the engine to avoid such issues in the future. Share This Page Welcome to the EGS.net Blog. Group A streptococcus infections in neonatal intensive care units in Israel and Jordan. In Israel and Jordan, the mortality rate from neonatal group A streptococcal infections has been estimated to be around 10%. Since treatment of these patients is difficult and the disease is very contagious, the authors decided to study the etiology and epidemiology of the disease. A total of 36 patients were admitted during a period of 2.5 years to the neonatal intensive care units in the two centers (Palestine, Israel and Jordan). Nineteen of the 36 patients had early onset disease. The overall mortality rate was 16.6%. It was found to be higher in patients with
