Citystate: A Card Game of Building and Expansion is a card game for 2-6 players in which each player takes on the role of one of the city states of ancient Greece. The game is played on a square wooden board with each player taking up one of the four corners. Game play revolves around the foundations built, the roads, walls, mines, port, commercial buildings, temples, and of course the enemy forces of the other player. Your goal is to build up your city from nothing and expand your empire across the map. Each player goes in for 1-5 points of construction, and 2-4 points of expansion, i.e. your city to your opponents city. Once your points run out you must either get lucky and win by construction points, or you must defeat your opponent on the battlefield. Game Play The object of the game is to build up your city to a maximum of 10 points. The game lasts until someone has built their city to 10 points (the city is destroyed during construction). Each turn you must make two decisions; one on how many points you want to spend, the other is what kind of construction to make. Construction - Each player draws one card and must play one of the five building cards. You must either spend your construction in this way or spend a number of points equal to that of your opponents for the turn. If you choose to build a road you can also spend a card which can be used later to enable you to build across the board without the need for city-hopping. Expansion - You also can spend a number of points equal to that of your opponents to expand your city across the board as shown in the image. As your city expands your total points also increase by 1-4. Each city is worth 3 points when it comes to combat. Drawing cards - Each player gets 4 cards to draw from during their turn. Walking - The 4th was first was only available by paying 1 point. Once you have paid 1 point you can travel a number of spaces equal to that of your card. These may be one of the other cards in your hand, or the five combat cards on the board. Once you have used a card you cannot take it back, so you must decide whether or not to use it. If you have no more space in your hand, you may also use a card to travel across the board. Board -
