“HyperMotion Technology is a big leap forward for EA SPORTS FIFA. We’ve been able to use real life data to create a more in-depth, authentic, and realistic player experience,” said David Rutter, executive producer on FIFA 22. “By looking at all of the movements involved in a complete football match, fans will be able to more naturally react to the action and observe the finer details of the sport.” FIFA 22 introduces the new “Line Men” mechanic, which augments the momentum of players on the ball and those near the end-line. FIFA 22 captures line men in motion and uses that data to adapt the physics during gameplay, allowing players to slide and shift in more realistic ways. “We’ve always been focused on delivering the most authentic and physics-driven gameplay experience possible. We now have a deeply-integrated physics engine that allows us to accurately simulate the fine details of football movement,” said Jeff Astleman, FIFA Lead Gameplay Engineer. “Thanks to many years of work with motion capture and real-life tests, we’re now able to create the most detailed and realistic physics simulation for players to compete in a football game.” FIFA 22 introduces the 3D Player Radar, which dynamically tracks players as they move through space. Player Radar applies new Catching Behaviors and effects, such as a player being blocked on a tackle while following an incoming pass and then having the ball pushed away from him on the next touch. The 3D Player Radar will be unique in that it lets players take control of their movement, separate from the movement of other players, allowing players to use their individual skills to dominate the game. “The 3D Player Radar is an exciting new element to FIFA 22. It makes a huge difference to the gameplay by giving every player in your team their own radar to use,” said Michael Petke, FIFA Lead Gameplay Designer. “We’ve included an advanced Radar Behavior system that helps players making decisions in moments of heat and pressure, while keeping teams focused on the task at hand. We’ve also included new Radar-based Catching Behaviors to make the most unpredictable plays in the league.” FIFA 22 introduces a whole new experience when it comes to Offsides. Players now react dynamically to tackles, collisions and markers to determine if they were in an

FIFA on the PS2 was the best football video game of its time and a critical success. In 2001, PC Gamer declared it “the best football game ever made.” FIFA has achieved over 50 Game of the Year and Editor’s Choice awards since. Notable achievements include the 2003 The GameSpy Game of the Year, 2003 IGN Game of the Year, 2005 FIFA Street 3 Game of the Year, 2007 Sports Game of the Year for the PC, 2007 Mobile Game of the Year for the PSP and 2009 Mobile Game of the Year for Android. Franchise modes have been updated and even expanded, like the in-depth Ultimate Team mode. The graphical presentation has also improved, taking advantage of the series’ new features, like TrueSkill Player Motion System that mimics real-world football. The most significant new feature of FIFA 23 is the new dynamic career mode, which promotes players, new challenges and new opportunities. “Realism and emotion, teamwork and individualism, unpredictability and unbridled excitement – that’s the power of football. That’s what makes it so great and that’s what we strive to bring to the living room with FIFA,” said David Rutter, Senior Producer, FIFA. “FIFA on the PS2 was the best football video game of its time and a critical success.” As the premiere football video game series, FIFA on the PlayStation2 set the bar for what was possible with next-gen technology. It was the first to combine real-world motion capture, dynamic physics, and expansive rosters and clubs, all in one production. The series continues to push those limits to deliver the most realistic football games on consoles and PC. The dynamic camera, pitch and weather conditions, new on-pitch systems, advanced animation and most importantly, thousands of hours of gameplay optimization, have made this generation’s games the best sports games of all time.
