sample size are necessary to confirm our findings. Third, the interaction test between the TNF-α level and serum a-syn, which is associated with progression of PD, was not performed due to lack of power, but a trend is evident. Forth, we did not analyze the ROC curve and how much serum a-syn levels increased to predict PD stages in this study; this will be studied in the future. In conclusion, we found a high prevalence of a-syn deposits in cbl-c patients. The occurrence of a-syn was higher in idiopathic PD patients than in patients with PD due to other reasons. The a-syn level in cbl-c patients was much higher than in non-Cbl-deficient PD patients. Increased a-syn deposition is possibly associated with cbl-c deficiency in PD and a-syn is a promising diagnostic biomarker of PD. Large-scale prospective cohort studies are needed to confirm our findings.
