many continental islands and Lake Eyre are among the new finds off the Queensland coast, says a global oceanographer. The study, presented at the 2018 European Geosciences Union (EGU) General Assembly, reveals an extensive network of seamounts has been identified in the Great Australian Bight, one of the world's deepest sections of open ocean. Dr Kevin Smith, from the University of Western Australia's Oceans Institute, said: "The Great Australian Bight is one of the most remote and understudied ocean basins on Earth, with over half of the bight's seabed located beyond state jurisdiction. Offshore this vast area, rich in minerals and energy, opens our eyes to the potential of a long-term, sustainable, high-tech mining industry for Australia." Dr Smith is co-author of a new study in the journal Science, which reveals the largest known sea-floor array in the Southern Hemisphere is located more than 100 kilometres west of South Australia, off the coast of Kangaroo Island, and is made up of five large seamounts, ranging in diameter from 1.5 to 3 kilometres. He said: "The large seabed feature lies outside state waters and is considered a UNESCO World Heritage Site, meaning no one is able to exploit it. The large volume of minerals that could be extracted from such a large feature is the incentive for proposals for deep-sea mining in the region, which have not been very well received by the community. "The geology of the region indicates that the feature was formed during the Miocene period, when the continent of Australia was much larger than it 0cc13bf012

The Dark Knight Rises 720p, The Dark Knight RisesÂ .Q: Using socket programming to send strings in C I'm trying to use socket programming to send strings (more than one), but when I send the string "test1" for example it sends only the first character. I use this code: #include #include #include #include #include #include int main() { int sock, n; struct sockaddr_in server, client; sock = socket(AF_INET, SOCK_STREAM, 0); server.sin_family = AF_INET; server.sin_addr.s_addr = INADDR_ANY; server.sin_port = htons(11201); while(1) { if ((n = connect(sock, (struct sockaddr *) &server, sizeof(server))) == -1) perror("error connecting"); else if (write(sock, "test1", 5) == -1) perror("error writing"); else printf("Server received string: %s ", "string"); } return 0; } What am I doing wrong? A: There is a typo: if (write(sock, "test1", 5) == -1) Here, there should be no space at the end: if (write(sock, "test1", 5) == -1) Also, there is no need for the inet/in module: server.sin_port = htons(11201); Also, there is a difference between SOCK_STREAM and SOCK_STREAMS. The fact that there are more than a dozen quirky neighborhoods sprinkled across the city is one of the primary reasons people come to this rustic-yet-modern place. Additionally, visitors are drawn to the fun-loving atmosphere that this city exudes. If you’re still searching for the best things to do in Salt Lake City, then consider one of the following ideas. #1: Visit Zions' Narrows The narrowest point in Utah is found in Zions' Narrows. Located along the Jordan River, this place will have you believing that you’re in a different universe. The swirling wind and the location that this canyon offers makes it such a great place for nature lovers to visit. Also, take note of the way the canyon curves in every direction. There are plenty of places to walk around and explore. #2: Tour The Spandex Building One of the quirky buildings in Utah is The Spandex Building. The building was designed to look like a pair of legs of a tuxedo, and it has more than 200,000 square feet of spaces. You will find
