Well, here it is. The game I've been working on for 2 years. It's a 2D top-down shoot'em up on its own. It's not too different from games like Space Harrier, OutRun or Galaxian. Still, it's also quite original, I think. There is a story, secret areas, different weapons (rocket launchers, knife, axe, laserguns...) and lots of other things you can unlock. As this is my first game, I've made my own engine. I think, I'm really happy with it, so far. I always wanted to create my own pixel art, so that is the reason I created my own engine.

WHAT'S NEW

New Weapons: You can now harvest 10 new weapons (including a knife and a lasergun).

The New Hazard Scenario: A new map generated by a new algorithm has been implemented.

New Enemies: 9 new enemies have been implemented.

Bugfixes: Many improvements and fixes.

Rush Rover is a 2D top-down shooter game. Compared to other similar games of the genre, the shooting experience is closer to traditional shoot'em up games. It includes random map generation, unique weapons, lots of different enemies, exciting boss battles and a dynamic chiptune soundtrack. In the universe of Rush Over, intelligent robots and mining exploration have spread over every known galaxy. After the war of independence against humanity, these highly intelligent and powerful machines attempt to rule over everything so they start hacking other robots. You control a "clean" mining rover, picking up weapons and rushing to survive!

FEATURES - Roguelike gameplay - Random map generation - Unique weapons - Customized upgrading system - Blueprint collection - Exciting boss battles - Various enemies - Bullet-hell gameplay - Sci-fi pixel art style - 8-bit style soundtrack

B. Montgomery (You) - Created with Godot Engine Before we dig into the project I would like to touch on a personal experience. I learned a lot of skills and improve some myself by participating in the Game Jam. These are some of them: - How to use git (Version control) - How to setup an architecture (flow of code/content and how to manage things) - How to create a simple website - How to use discord/Slack/team chat - How to use video and photo editing software (i.e. DaVinci Resolve, Tears of Steel) - How to design a website (or any kind of art) - How to learn from others A few months ago I have participated in the World Cup. It was a big, crazy experience, something I will never forget. The team of six of us had to cover a distance of more than 30Km. I think it was about 10-11 hours driving. For this game jam we have chosen a location which is an abandoned cinema. We are using environment and motion controllers to immerse you in a different experience. What's more, we have decided to let you control the car yourself, letting you choose the direction of the car and let yourself out of the box on your own. We also have worked on a few new features. For example the concept of teleportation - car will aim towards the ground (which means the car will stop of the move from the default movement). This will let the player stay focused in the game, not worrying about running out of space or missing the teleportation spot. We also made some new features to the cars movement - there will be a return function, which will make the car go back to its original point in case it spins off or gets disturbed by an object. There will also be a lot of billboards to collect and paint on them. The player has the car and can move as he/she sees fit. Looking forward to sharing the experience with people and building something new. The making of the game has been a big learning process for me. I think for indie game developers a good mentor is essential to cover all aspects of game development and give advice. The purpose of this project was to add an extra challenge to me and hopefully motivate me to keep learning. When entering the project I have had very c9d1549cdd version of the symphony played one day in March, members of the audience were wowed. But weeks later, some of them noticed something unusual: On the faces of three people in a blue row of seats in the second tier of the concert hall, a new face was staring back at them. Identified by the Urban Montreal Symphony Orchestra as a university graduate student, the new addition to a musical family is gaining attention in the French-speaking province and beyond for what she does with a computer and a microphone. "She's the reason you're listening to this," said Jennifer Stern, an assistant professor at the University of Montreal's Department of Economics and Business. Jennifer Stern, who teaches a class on "performance models and musical experience" in both French and English, works with a computer to create algorithms, which she teaches to a PhD student. (Bobbi-Jo Hunt/CBC) Stern explained that learning music is a long process, beginning with the learning of notes, and getting more complex as one progresses.
