A developing body of evidence supports the use of patient-reported outcome measures (PROMs) for distal radius fracture (DRF). However, the literature lacks evidence of the psychometric properties of nurse-developed PROMs. The primary aim of the study was to evaluate the validity of the PROM-Distal Radius Fracture of the Arm, Shoulder, and Hand (PROM-DASH) and PROM-Distal Radioulnar Joint (PROM-DUJ) for the assessment of distal radius fracture and distal radioulnar joint injury. A secondary aim was to evaluate the PROM-DUJ's utility as a clinical tool by examining the relationship between PROM-DUJ and radiographic findings. Participants with a DRF or distal radioulnar joint injury completed a face-to-face interview. They also underwent radiographic evaluation including: (1) plain radiographs for distal radius fracture; (2) radiographs of the distal ulna and forearm for distal radioulnar joint injury; and (3) manual muscle testing of the elbow and wrist for strength. Construct validity, internal consistency and responsiveness were assessed. A clinical validity was evaluated through the correlation between radiographic findings and PROM-DUJ. A preliminary assessment of construct validity and responsiveness was evaluated. Participants were patients attending emergency departments due to DRF (n = 33) or a distal radioulnar joint injury (n = 8

Q: Ensure pass a parameter from portlet to servlet using JSP/Servlet I am trying to implement a screen that have an input data. This will be passed to servlet and using jsp i will be displaying the output. I am using a Portlet (refer link below) I am able to pass parameters from JSP to Servlet, how can I pass a parameter from Servlet to JSP? A: Servlets and JSPs are two different technologies. You can pass parameters from a Servlet to JSP using `request.setAttribute` method of the request object. As you are using portlet, servlet and JSP are not aware of each other. At what you are referring is about passing parameters to JSP so your solution would be in the following way: 1) Load your `output.jsp` or jsp page which will be displayed in the screen as you are doing already. 2) After loading your `output.jsp` you need to pass parameters to it using `request.setAttribute` method. You can pass multiple parameters to the jsp page in a single call using comma(,) separator as follows. `request.setAttribute("param1","param1value"); request.setAttribute("param2","param2value");` 3) Now you can access these parameters inside your jsp page using the following `String param1 = request.getAttribute("param1").toString();` `String param2 = request.getAttribute("param2").toString();` In order to get data from your servlet, you can either pass it as a query parameter to your `output.jsp`. To send data from Servlet to JSP using query parameters, do the following `String param1 = request.getParameter("param1");` 4) In your `output.jsp` page, you need to modify it as follows `//This will give you the value of query parameter param1.` 5) For more info on request object refer following link http e79caf774b

Ufedphysicalanalyzerdownloadcrack49Q: Class'mockery_method_call' not found I am trying to mock a method with phpUnit. I am using mockery to do this. Code I am testing is as follows: $r = new PX\Request();
$this->mockery =
Mockery::mock('PX\Controller\Request');
$this->mockery->method('doSave');
$this->mockery->shouldReceive('doSave');
$this->mockery->method('setAll'); Do I have to do anything extra for mocks to work? The issue is for above code I am getting Class'mockery_method_call' not found. I tried to use following as well. $this->mockery =
Mockery::mock('PX\Controller\Request');
$this->mockery->shouldReceive('setAll'); Any clue? A: Set the autoloader to false and then it will work. phpunit --configuration
