Instead of using a separate application to send your e-mails, you can now use a limited version of the official GMail client. This allows you to easily send standard messages without having to use a dedicated e-mail client, such as Eudora, Outlook Express or Thunderbird. You can also reply directly to messages in the body of the mail, without having to use the reply button. You can also access the Mail settings and manage other mailboxes, including the account for your domain. Useful improvements: - Type of message in the "New message" box: "Thunderbird mail" or "Gmail mail" - One-line reply in the "New mail" box: "Email from Thunderbird/Gmail" or "Reply to message" - Multi-line reply in the "New mail" box: "Email to Thunderbird" or "Reply to all" (requires POP3 connection) - One-line reply using the "Minimize window" option - The "Toggle position" button changes the position of the window on the screen, when it is minimized or maximized. - The "Exit" button displays the "Exit" window. - The "Toggle status bar" button displays the status bar or hides it. - Access to the mail settings, including the user account for the domain. - Customizable interface, with a semi-transparent background. The project is included in the Portable package, there is no need to install it locally.
