I was editing a short 30-second-ish video on my PC and needed to go to bed, but I wanted to make sure I could continue editing if I did go to bed and woke up late. With a USB key, I was able to quickly resume editing and didn't lose any work. I can imagine these Portable apps working well on a laptop with USB too. Wesley was a TI-84 Plus calculator. This is the full version of a calculator for teachers. It was mostly for TI-84 Plus users, but it included a few features that were not in any of the previous versions. This calculator came with a 90-day satisfaction guarantee. With the guarantee, you could return the calculator within 90 days for any reason, and we would give you a replacement for free. I would give this calculator an 8.5 out of 10 for value, and a 7.9 out of 10 for features. To see some of the new features, check out my review of the TI-84 Plus SE from last year. It's hard to find a place to listen to music in an airport. I wanted to listen to music from my iPod while waiting for my flight to get in, and I didn't want to hear any ads. Enter Bose headphones. They had some limitations; the headphones weren't very compact, and I couldn't check my email. That's when I discovered that the Bose headphones can connect to iOS devices with Bluetooth. That's how you can get your music on the go. I would give this accessory an 8 out of 10. Bose CEO John Chambers has strong opinions about the cloud. He thinks they are too expensive, and that they limit the freedom of creativity. But he agreed with me. I'm not crazy about either option. I needed a simple music player, and I used to have a traditional audio-video player. I didn't want to update both apps every time I downloaded new music. I wanted an app that had the basic features of a music player, and didn't want it to lock me out of my music whenever it wanted. The iPhone has all of those features. I could just put my music in the cloud. It was mobile. It was cool. I could listen to my music for free. There were no limits on the time I could listen to my music. It was all good. But I was 6d1f23a050
