Description of the Related Art Heretofore, there has been proposed a vehicle height adjusting device for a vehicle including a vehicle body on which tires are mounted and whose height is adjusted by a height adjusting device (refer to Japanese Unexamined Utility Model Publication No. 5-81491). This vehicle height adjusting device is arranged to be operated by means of a vehicle floor shift lever. When the vehicle floor shift lever is in a parked position, an activation pressure chamber is closed by a diaphragm valve. In this state, the operation of a vehicle body is disabled. When the vehicle floor shift lever is operated from the parked position to an unbraked position, a pressure chamber is opened to be communicated with an atmospheric pressure. In this state, an elastic member deforms the diaphragm valve. Accordingly, a ball valve is opened and the activation pressure chamber is discharged to the atmospheric pressure. A solenoid valve is opened and a pressure is generated in a pressure chamber of the height adjusting device. By this operation, the
