I have the following code: `$(document).ready(function(){ $('#mytextarea').click(function(){ }); });` but it is not working. I want to add some text to a textarea when a user clicks on it. And then to clear the text from the textarea when the user stops clicking on it. A: Use event delegation `$(document).on('click', '#mytextarea', function(){ });` Delegated events are based on event delegation, they only apply to the descendants of the selected element at the time the event is triggered. [Joint gene therapy using FVIII and FIX]. Both haemophilia A and haemophilia B are lethal diseases if left untreated. Current treatment of haemophilia A and B consists of either non- or recombinant coagulation factor replacement. In both cases the number of administered coagulation factor is limited, partially due to the short half-life of coagulation factors and the production of neutralizing antibodies. Gene therapy is an alternative approach to prevent or to reverse the development of inhibitors against coagulation factors, by substituting the defective factor in the circulation. A major advantage of gene therapy is the unlimited amount of delivered protein expressed in the desired tissue 6d1f23a050
