Alien3 (2015) 'Alien3' is a strange one... If 'Alien' had a little of the comedy and the action of 'An American Werewolf in London', maybe we could've got on with it. It's certainly not the worst of the Alien series (granted, Alien3 is the end of the series in Alien form, but considering that the other two films have been much better sequels to the original film), but its a still a very decent zombie/horror film. In 'Alien3', you are again confronted with an alien, this time one that has grown rather large (there is a chance it is the size of the ship from Alien in some places), and is attacking a mining colony that is on a space station (so, it's in space, but a mining colony). Its a 'jumble' of 'Alien', and 'Alien3': the alien is mainly around, and then gets involved in a little more action than it did in the first two films. It's more claustrophobic, and the film is totally focused around the main character, Ellen Ripley. It's a sequel in name, but is the most standalone of the alien series. It's not a re-telling of the events of 'Alien', its a continuation from the events of that film. Ellen Ripley (played by Sigourney Weaver) is one tough S.O.B.: she is a six figure heiress, she's working in the mining industry on a space station called Hab 6. There is a small amount of action, some bloody close-ups, and some wonderful suspense (the kind you can't get from a series of flick set on an ocean liner or on a ship!). There are some great set ups, and some nice chemistry between Weaver and Michael Biehn - who played Corporal David from 'Alien'. Weaver is great: there is some sense of humour throughout, but also in the 'Alien' universe of ideas (we should have listened to the ghost from the space station at the end of

Inventor..Q: Stochastic Integrals
and Black and Scholes pricing function I'm given the following
definition of the Black-Scholes
market model There are N asset prices
 S_i , of which the first $N-1$ are identical, with probability density function

$$\begin{equation} f(S) = N \sqrt{\frac{3}{4\pi}} \exp\left(-\frac{3}{2} S^2\right) \end{equation}$$

and the last asset price has density function

$$g(S) = N \sqrt{\frac{3}{2\pi}} \left(1 + \frac{S}{3}\right)^{-5}$$
 and I'm asked to use it to show that $$u(S_0, t) = E \left[\int_0^t F_s ds + \int_0^t S_s dW_s, \right]$$

 is the Black and

Scholes PDE for
option pricing,
where

$$\begin{equation} F_t = E[g(S_t)] \end{equation}$$
