Q: How do I set up branches on the repository in Eclipse? I have to work on a project on one server and project on another server. How do I setup branches on Eclipse? And check those branches? A: Assuming you are using the CVS plugin on Eclipse. Go to the root directory of the project, here you'll have to work with the the root directory. Create a new folder here, that has the same name as the project, and another one inside that called work. Create a new text file in that work folder, and name it.cvsignore Put this into that file: *.swp - this will mean that any changes made in this folder will not be checked back into the project Another solution would be to use a SCM like Perforce or TFS, where you can create both branches and set up whatever you want to keep in separate repositories. See more on TFS at 2, R3, R4, R5 and R6 represent the same or different substituents of the phenyl group, and R2, R3 and R4 being each, independently, hydrogen, alkyl or cycloalkyl.
