Earlier this month, I moderated a panel on the state of scholarship, teaching and learning in higher education at the ACTAL conference in Stockholm. The panel, "Applying Post-Qualification Research: The Role of Universities in the Developing Countries", brought together two of the most relevant new figures working in this space, Prof Maurice Glasman from the University of Amsterdam and Prof Munyaradzi Gwisai from Makerere University. Addressing questions around the relative values of established universities and of the non-formalisation of university education, the panel was particularly attentive to the challenges that the formal and non-formal education sectors face in post-colonial Africa. Now that the conference is over and the papers and presentations are posted online, I'd like to share with readers what I said (and didn't say) at the event. This was an interesting and promising session on applying post-qualification research in the developing world. Dr Alem Alem's Abstract: The concept of the "University" as a purely formal academic institution for the University of the West Indies in Kingston, Jamaica, is based on a colonial Euro-centric system of higher education that lacks the socio-cultural diversity and the intellectual freedom that other systems of higher education have afforded in the past. As a way of addressing this colonial legacy, I have begun the non-formalisation of the University of the West Indies (UWI). This process entails the application of university principles to the communities in which I teach. My objective for this presentation is to detail the outcomes of my experiences applying the concept of "the university" to non-formal education within the University of the West Indies. The concept of the "university" is primarily as a formal, academic institution of higher learning. I aim to show that this traditional concept ignores and/or dismisses the academic achievement of the majority of the Jamaican people, who have historically been excluded from this formal academic institution. I would argue that the "university" is a concept that has found its way into the Caribbean through colonization. This, in turn, has led to the overall exclusion of the Caribbean. My objective is to begin to re-envision the university for a more inclusive, better functioning, and more culturally relevant institution. In this session I will explore how open education has been challenging the traditional university model, and will consider how open education can contribute to the

In general, a linear motor has higher speed, higher performance, higher durability and smaller size than a conventional motor. Also, such a linear motor can be used with high efficiency and has advantages of being light and having no noise. Therefore, a linear motor has been used in a variety of fields. Recently, from an aspect of high-speed and high-efficiency, in particular, a linear motor that employs a three-phase motor is frequently used. In such a three-phase linear motor, a triangular wave is output by a driver after being converted into a rectangular wave through a rectifier and converted into a sine wave through a low-pass filter, and the sine wave is multiplied by a unit pulse by a high-speed triac device to be supplied to a motor. Also, a control device for driving such a linear motor that employs a three-phase linear motor is disclosed in Korean Patent No. 10-0390587 (Date of publication, Jan. 28, 2004), in which a main transformer is connected in series to a drive power source, and a drive circuit is connected in series to a secondary coil of the main transformer so as to drive a three-phase motor, and a main transformer is connected in series to a drive power source, and a drive circuit is connected in series to a secondary coil of the main transformer so as to drive a three-phase motor, and an auxiliary transformer is connected in series to an auxiliary coil of the main transformer. Also, according to Korean Patent No. 10-0390587, a device for driving a three-phase motor includes a circuit that receives an input voltage from a drive power source through a main transformer and a pair of a drive circuit and a secondary coil of the main transformer, receives an input voltage through an auxiliary transformer, rectifies and smoothes the input voltage through a rectifier, a bridge circuit, and a capacitor, converts the input voltage into a sine wave, and converts the sine wave into a rectangular wave, a driver is driven by the rectangular wave, and the three-phase motor is driven by the driver. Furthermore, in a power supply device using a three-phase linear motor, it is necessary to implement a stable power supply, and a conventional power supply device has a structure 6d1f23a050
