Description of the Related Art Conventionally, an image pickup apparatus including an imaging function performs focus detection on a subject image and detects a defocus amount. Such focus detection is performed in various manners in the image pickup apparatus. For example, in Japanese Patent Laid-Open No. 2008-105974, a method of detecting a defocus amount using an image of light flux passing through an imaging element is disclosed. Furthermore, in Japanese Patent Laid-Open No. 2008-105974, example of performing focus detection using an image of a pair of light fluxes from different cameras is disclosed. In a case where an image of a subject is picked up, the subject passes through an area where no light flux is incident on the image pickup apparatus. Therefore, a subject image outside a target area to be focused on can be picked up as a blurred image. According to a conventional image pickup method, focus detection is performed on such a blurred image. However, the subject image outside the target area to be focused on may be erroneously determined as a defocus amount. No one is inside the home.
