High blood pressure in children and adolescents is a risk factor for heart disease in adulthood. The aim of this study was to investigate the blood pressure control and the heart rate in hypertensive adolescents and to evaluate which factors could influence blood pressure control. A total of 102 adolescents attending our outpatient clinic were included in this cross-sectional study. We investigated the relation between demographic characteristics and socioeconomic data, and blood pressure and heart rate control. The mean blood pressure (BP) and heart rate (HR) were $143 \pm 19/93 \pm 10$ and 84 ± 14 beats per minute, respectively. The blood pressure was controlled in 72 adolescents (70.5%). Fifteen patients (14.7%) had a systolic blood pressure (SBP) level ≥ 160 mmHg. The patients whose parents had high levels of education had better control of SBP ($P = .009$). Low HR was noted in 56 patients (55.5%). Girls had significantly higher heart rates than boys ($P = .009$).
