i have a hp laserjet 1215 that was my first printer. i used it for years. when my daughter got a new computer, i tried to install my hp 1215 laserjet that works on my old computer, but, it doesn't recognize the printer. is there any software that i can download to my laptop that will make the printer work or do i need to get a new printer? i have a hp laserjet p1005 that is connected via usb to a laptop via a usb to parallel cable. the usb cable is the one that came with the laserjet. i have tried to install the hp p1005 driver and it doesn't work. i have a dell studio 1558 laptop. i have a hp laserjet p1005 that is connected to it via a usb to parallel cable. the usb cable is the one that came with the laserjet. i have tried to install the hp p1005 driver and it doesn't work. this is a great tutorial and clear. i used this guide for a whole bunch of printers i had purchased from a garage sale. the first one i tried was a faxjet 1320, which had some odd issues. after some research, i found out that a faxjet 1525 had the same issues, so i decided to give the faxjet 1320 a try. it came up as a scsi device in the device manager, so i didn't think it was going to work. well, i plugged it in and it was up and running, but still didn't have the scanner function, and my scanner wasn't working. i followed the instructions and everything worked out. i have a fuji scanner sc1000, which i can't seem to find a driver for. anyone know anything about that one? i have a dell optiplex gx230 with the i350 network driver loaded. the network card is a broadcom bcm4303. the problem is that the driver takes over the network connection, so i can't even use a wireless card. i have tried to disable it in the device manager and then re-enable it, but it won't work. i know the driver is loaded because if i uninstall it, i can't connect to the network, and the other computers on the network can connect to each other. i found this site on the net, but it didn't help. can anyone help me?
