it didn't last long, though. the group's longtime manager and father of the group's founder, dave holmes, died in early 2008, and the group decided to bow out. but by then, hip-hop was well and truly in the midst of changing, and the members of the old guard were finally getting the attention they deserved. they had a huge night at the 2009 bet awards, where the group was honored with the first-ever award for best hip-hop group. it was an evening many had waited for, but perhaps not as many had anticipated. the group proved themselves to be vital to the sound of hip-hop, as well as one of the most important acts of its time. and while their music might be considered dated, they have a timeless sound that resonates and is still relevant. indeed, they were the perfect guests for the notorious b.i.g.'s ready to die album, which was just released this month. it's a fitting reminder of the group's role in hip-hop's rich history. the attention was long overdue. a highlight of the band is that they take traditional reggae and fuse it with rock and roll and hip-hop. it's a very fun and upbeat song. i think it's one of their best songs. i listen to it all the time. i love this song. it's just a fun song to listen to. i love it. i just think it's a great song. and it's a fun song. it's a good song, too. sometimes you need to give yourself a break. and as we know, the fanfare that greeted the band on its return to touring was as genuine as the fervor with which its music has been embraced. thanks in no small part to the tireless efforts of a small and now-legendary band of heavy music lovers, the band is back and ready to rock and roll. and not only will they do so with swagger and heart, but with a sense of pride and love for its fans. and what better way to do so than to bring an album of its greatest hits?
