If you download an album or your whole selection, do not return to the band's website immediately. Wait until after you've finished downloading and paid for the album. You'll get a download code that should be sent to you via email. Also, after you download, make sure to make a back-up copy of the files that you downloaded. If something were to happen and the cracked files were lost or destroyed, you would not be able to get the music back. [] As the rest of the CTFs on Goca, this one is just a URL request. On the final box, the goal of the challenge is to navigate a web interface and get the flag. It takes a password that is literally an md5 hash of your password. An md5 (sometimes called a second md5) is an algorithm that produces a 128-bit number which when converted to hexadecimal, always truncates to a fixed number of characters. The second hash is a shortened version of the first using the same character set (typically lowercase) and length. The full URL used to find the flag is the following.

`http://189.40.128.139:2109/code-for-t-pain/?code[]`

This gives you the full md5 and then a truncated md5 for your password. The md5 you submit gets run through the solution and the secret that is created gets displayed, using the form shown below.

A quick info dump: the name of the site/server is "t-pain", there is a "crack/" subdomain, and the site is accessible at both pain.nspkt01.info:8080/codex/code?code. There is also a "flag" domain, for which the "flag.tar" file is the payload!

`http://189.40.128.139:2109/crack/?code` and `http://t-`

And the only way to learn it is to look it up on Wikipedia. Then I found out you can watch videos of it online. The first one looks fairly interesting, I think I wanna get my hands on it and try it out. But, I feel like I would never learn how to do that and it might be better to look it up on Google and just find videos online.
